Death Comes To Cardinal Hayes at 70; Pope Mourns

Prelate Passes in Sleep; Pontiff Expresses His 'Profound Sadness.'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 4.—Patrick Joseph Cardinal Hayes, orphan boy who rose from the sidewalks of New York to leadership of the richest Roman Catholic archdiocese in the world, died in his sleep early today at the camp near Menticello, N. Y., where he had sought summer rest for 40 years.

CARDINAL HAYES.

The 70-year-old prelate was found dead in bed by his secretary, Mgr. John J. Casey, when he went to awaken his superior, who usually celebrated mass in his private chapel at 8:30 o'clock every morning. Death was attributed to heart disease.

The Cardinal had gone in July to his Cottage of St. Thomas Aquinas at St. Joseph's camp, where Dominican sisters annually provide holidays for poor children from the archdiocese of New York. He was to have returned to New York City next week.

Breakdown in 1932.

He took his usual 2-mile walk yesterday afternoon and had not complained of illness before retiring. He had never completely recovered, however, from a breakdown suffered at the Eucharistic Congress in Dublin in 1932.

From Castel Gandolfo, in Italy, Pope Pius expressed "profound sadness" at the passing of Cardinal Hayes, and ordered messages of condolence sent. As the news spread through New York and the Nation, leaders of church and state immediately issued statements eulogizing the Cardinal.

President Roosevelt paid his tribute to Cardinal Hayes on his way to the Eastern Shore of Maryland. He said: "I am deeply sorry to hear of the passing of His Eminence, Cardinal Hayes. I had the privilege of his friendship for many long years. His great spiritual leadership has had a deep influence on our generation, and all of us who knew him and had sincere affection for him will feel his loss."

Grief at St. Patrick's.

First formal announcement of the death of the white-haired prince of the church came in his beloved cathedral, St. Patrick's, in New York City, where more than 3,000 were gathered for solemn high mass. The Rev. Henry F. Hammer, assistant rector of the cathedral and celebrant of the mass, said simply:

"I am about to make the most difficult announcement that I have ever been called upon to make from the pulpit of the cathedral. I shall make the announcement in very few words, because my heart is so filled with grief that I could not speak longer.

"Your archbishop, Cardinal Hayes, passed away in his sleep last night. Will you please pray for the repose of his soul?"

So choked with grief was Father Hammer that he omitted leading the prayer. His voice broke as he made the announcement. He asked each

Nazi Congress Nears.

By the Associated Press.

Nuremberg, Germany, Sept. 4.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler will make a grand entry into Nuremberg tomorrow for the Nazi Party Congress, with Czechoslovakia the issue in the foreground and Austria in the background.

He will lead the party, which he founded and used as a springboard to world power, through eight days of speech and policy-making.

His annual keynoting proclamation will be read Tuesday, reviewing Nazi achievements and pointing the way to the future, and Hitler himself will make at least half a dozen speeches during the congress.

The convention, always an event of superlative figures, will eclipse its past records because of the addition of participants from Austria, annexed March 13.

Some 500,000 Nazis will be there officially, in addition to hundreds of thousands of visitors.

There will be great army displays but these will not interfere with the regular army and navy maneuvers now proceeding simultaneously.

Crowded Program.

Hundreds of thousands of Nazis will welcome Hitler when he arrives about 1 p. m. (7 a. m. E. S. T.) tomorrow to preside at the sixth party convention since his assumption of power.

Before the Congress closes September 12 with a speech at 7 p. m. (1 p. m. E. S. T.) by the chancellor, there will be a crowded program of speeches and displays.

Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy in party matters; Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda; Alfred Rosenberg, ideological leader of the party; Robert Ley, head of the German Labor Front; Otto Dietrich, leader of the Nazi press; Baldur von Schirach, youth leader, and Walter Darre, minister of agriculture, each will be heard in a speech on the matters under his care.

Of the top men in Germany, the only one who will not speak will be Field Marshal Goering, who

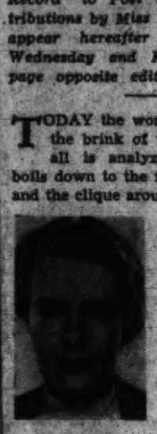
On The Record

Hitler Faces Dilemma: Catastrophic War or Bitter Retreat.

By Dorothy Thompson

Note—This timely article by Dorothy Thompson marks the introduction of her column "On the Record" to Post readers. Contributions by Miss Thompson will appear hereafter on Monday, Wednesday and Friday on the page opposite editorial.—Editor.

TODAY the world trembles on the brink of war, and when all is analyzed, everything boils down to the fact that a man and the clique around him in Nazi Germany have got themselves into a position where they can afford neither to make war nor to make peace. From victory to victory—remilitarization—fortification of the Rhineland—annexation of Austria—Hitler has been marching his way into catastrophe. Naziism started as a "movement," and it remains a movement—that is to say, its nature is that it must move. But the room in which it can now move safely has definitely reached its limits. Hitler must now either retreat or throw Germany and the world into catastrophe.



DOROTHY THOMPSON.

Let us not be deluded about any of the minor aspects of the issue. The woes of the Sudeten Germans, real or imagined, have little to do with it. Hitler is not moving to liberate the Germans in Upper Silesia, or the Polish corridor, and has openly washed his hands of the Germans in the Alto Adige (South Tyrol), whose nationality has been brutally exterminated. And he is celebrating his friendship with Hungary, whose German minority has been thoroughly and programatically Magyarized. The Sudeten German issue is only incidental to the question of whether or not Germany shall dominate Europe and the world. The Czechoslovakian democratic republic stands in the way of Germany's desired expansion to the East. Therefore, Czechoslovakia must be cut loose from her alliances in order to be destroyed, and so far no proposal of a compromise, however generous, is acceptable to Hitler, if it permits Czechoslovakia to survive as anything except a vassal state.

It is grotesque to talk about "liberating" the Sudeten Germans, who now enjoy more legal, spiritual, intellectual and economic

Special Cable to The Post.

Prague, Sept. 4.—Czechoslovakia's Sudeten Germans for the first time publicly acknowledged Germany's Fuehrer Hitler as their Fuehrer today and said they wanted their homeland within the frontiers of the Third Reich. The declaration was made at three meetings near the German border, one of them attended by Konrad Henlein, Sudeten Party chieftain.

The Sudeten Nazis demonstrated today as they never before dared to demonstrate. At Decin in the north, they sang the forbidden Horst Wessel song while Czech police looked on helplessly. It was a Sudeten outburst of feeling following the return of Henlein from his talks with Hitler at Berchtesgaden. Henlein himself said nothing, but obviously he had passed along the word that the lid was off.

[Henlein announced through his lieutenants that he and Hitler agreed there can be "no retreat" from Henlein's eight-point autonomy demands, the United Press reported.

[The Sudeten Party leaders asserted that "the Reich's Germans headed by Hitler are completely as one" in supporting the minority demands, and demanded that all Czechs immediately evacuate the Sudeten German areas.

[The speeches broke an oratorical truce that had existed for several weeks between the government and Henlein and constituted the first formal declaration that Hitler and the German people are behind the autonomy demands.—Editor's note.]

The government in Prague was grimly silent.

The demonstrations failed to cause much worry among members of the unofficial British mediation mission headed by Viscount Runciman. In the morning Runciman's chief aid, Frank Trelawny Arthur Ashton-Gwatkin, talked with Henlein for two hours and heard from him the instructions issued by Hitler.

Prague had the impression tonight the Sudeten Germans had been ordered to continue negotiat-

2 Kidnapers Free Wife; Ill And Starving

Officers Say California Rancher Did Not Pay Ransom.

By the Associated Press.

Marysville, Calif., Sept. 4.—Mrs. William R. Meeks, 55, returned home today from a 56-hour kidnaping ordeal, and officers said later they had found the spot where the woman, distraught and ill, allegedly was held for $15,000 ransom, which was not paid.

State Highway Patrol Chief E. Raymond Cato announced late today his officers had found a barren hillside seven miles northeast of Sheridan on which they discovered marks of blankets, cigaret stubs, crumpled wrappers and other evidence of a hideout.

Found on Highway.

A trail-like road wound about 25 yards from the spot, which is 3 miles from the highway on which Mrs. Meeks was found walking this morning by Bert Foster, a trucking contractor, who drove her the 13 miles to her ranch home.

The victim, suffering from shock and hunger, was put to bed at the Meeks home, and tonight her physician, Dr. P. B. Hoffman, said she might be developing pneumonia.

"She is running a slight temperature, and her condition is not as good as it was this morning," Dr. Hoffman declared. "The ultimate outcome will be doubtful for the next 24 or 48 hours. Anything can happen."

Authorities disclosed, meantime, that three orchard workers, taken into custody Saturday night near the Meeks home for drinking, were questioned about the case. Sheriff Charles J. McCoy, of Yuba County, said he doubted they were connected with the abduction.

G-Men Return.

Federal agents and State officers joined in the search for the hideout as soon as Mrs. Meeks appeared. The Federal agents had announced Friday night they were quitting the case because there was no evidence of violation of a Federal law. Tonight, Nat Pieper, head of the San Francisco office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said he had "no comment" as to why his men returned to the case.

District Attorney Lloyd Hewitt, acting as spokesman for the family, announced the return and later said no ransom money had been paid. He also said no ransom or extortion notes or letters had been received.

Chief E. Raymond Cato of the State highway patrol quoted Mrs. Meeks as saying she had not been mistreated, but had been forced to lie in a clump of brush containing poison oak.

"She said she was taken from home in her husband's automobile and to the gates of the 'Camp Far West Ranch of the Lincoln Packing Co., 3 miles from Wheatland," Cato said.

"She was blindfolded and her hands were bound," he said. "They

'Purge' Address Expected Today

Speech at Morgantown Urges 2-Mile Span 'as Soon as Possible.'

By Edward T. Folliard

A Staff Correspondent.

Crisfield, Md., Sept. 4.—Having virtually promised southern Maryland a two-mile, $3,000,000 bridge across the lower Potomac, President Roosevelt was cruising in Chesapeake Bay tonight storing up energy for a major political assault tomorrow.

He will land tomorrow morning for a 100-mile motor journey along Maryland's Eastern Shore which he hopes will drive Millard E. Tydings, "betrayer" of the New Deal, from the Senate.

With him will be his 69-year-old protege, Representative Lewis who opposes Tydings in the Democratic primary of September 12. The President is expected to give Lewis his formal blessing in the course of a Labor Day speech at Denton tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Smiles at Tydings Cheer.

On his way from Washington to Morgantown this morning, the President was greeted by about 4,000 persons altogether. Thousands of others must have made good their promise to stay away from the route of the caravan.

Tydings placards stared at President Roosevelt from trees and telegraph poles all the way down, and one man yelled "Rah for Tydings" from the roadside. He smiled and the President smiled.

They began calling the proposed bridge across the lower Potomac a "political bridge" after the Lewis strategists conceived the idea of having the President inspect the site two miles above Morgantown. The PWA had indicated no action was imminent.

However, the President appeared to be in dead earnest today when he told the Lewis boosters at Morgantown that the building of the bridge "has got to be done just as fast as we can possibly do it."

Hopes to Start Bridge.

"He's going to give us the bridge," spectators were heard to say afterward, "and he's coming down here to see it started."

The President had said:

"And so I hope to come back, perhaps before I leave Washington, to talk at the inauguration, the starting of the bridge across the

Levier Takes Greve Air Race, Breaks Record

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 4.—Tony Levier, of Los Angeles, fighting nip and tuck with Art Chester of the same town, won the 200-mile $25,000 Greve race today at the National Air Rabes with a speed of 250.881 miles an hour. One entry, George Dory, also of Los Angeles, flying a Bushey-McGrew special, crashed.

In winning, Levier set a new Greve record, but Chester was close behind with 250.416 miles per hour.

The old record was set by Michel Detroyat, of France.

Jacobson Third.

Dory was pulled from the wreckage of his plane at Fairview Village, five miles northwest of Cleveland, where he tried to put his ship down after his motor went dead.

He was taken to a Lakewood, Ohio, hospital, where attendants said his back was broken and his skull injured.

Dory did not complete his 130th lap of the 10-mile course. Joe Jacobson, of Kansas City, was third, and Earl Ortlan, of Los Angeles, fourth. Harry Crosby, Los Angeles, pulled out at the end of his 140th mile.

In taking first place Levier captured $10,000 in first-prize money and an additional $2,000 for setting a record.

Chester Takes Lead.

Levier made a bumpy landing, damaging a wing so badly that he said he would be unable to fly in tomorrow's $45,000 Thompson Race, the biggest purse in American air racing.

Chester, flying a plane which he built in his back yard, cut a pylon on his 150th mile and had to return to round it in accordance with the rules.

Even at the conclusion of 190 miles Chester, dogging the tail surface of his chief rival in the race, in which six planes were entered, momentarily seized the lead but had to relinquish it on the back stretch

Mexico Rejects Hull's Plan to Pay Americans

Note Accepts Arbitration, But Refuses to Agree on Compensation.

By the Associated Press.

The Mexican government yesterday refused to set up a sinking fund to pay for American-owned land seized under its agrarian laws and declined to promise to stop the seizures pending arrangements for prompt payment.

In a note to Secretary Hull, Mexico stated that, while it did not repudiate eventual compensation in theory, there was precedent for doing so.

Relations Chaotic.

The note referred to abandonment of the gold standard and devaluation of currency in some countries. Without mentioning that the United States had employed them, Mexico said these measures had been described as "confiscation pure and simple."

High officials felt that the note left business relations between the two countries chaotic.

The American land claims total slightly more than $10,000,000, and any agreement on them might set a precedent affecting much larger claims for seized oil properties.

While Secretary Hull refrained from any immediate reply, it was believed widely that Mexico's stand practically eliminated any possibility that the United States would resume purchasing a fixed amount of Mexican silver each month, a practice stopped soon after the oil seizures last February.

One Point Accepted.

One point of Hull's recent proposal, that a joint arbitration commission determine the values of the seized land, was accepted by Mexico. Officials here were said to feel that this partial acceptance was unsatisfactory unless definite arrangements for payment were made.

In his note of August 22, Secretary Hull took the position that under all recognized international law and practices Mexico had no right to seize American-owned lands without arrangement for compensation.

Farouk Escapes Assassin's Shot; Youth Is Seized

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—King Farouk, Egypt's 18-year-old monarch who has suppressed opposition with autocratic decrees, today narrowly escaped assassination.

A police officer, watching when the "boy king" was emerging from a swimming carnival, saw a young man aim a revolver at Farouk. He lunged at the would-be assassin, knocking his arm upward and sending the shot wild. A bystander was slightly wounded.

A bystander seized and wrestled with the assailant before the latter's arrest.

Farouk halted abruptly as the shot rang out and cries went up from the crowd across the street. He quickly recovered his composure and walked to his automobile, responding with a smile to cheers from the crowd.

Richard Whitney Popular in Prison

Special Dispatch to The Post

Ossining, N. Y., Sept. 4.—Richard Whitney, former president of the New York Stock Exchange, has become so popular with his fellow inmates in Sing Sing Prison that he may become an officer of the Mutual Welfare League of the prison soon, attendants said today.

One of the causes of his popularity is his democratic acceptance of regular prison fare, in contrast to the custom of some prisoners of preparing private meals for themselves.

250 Are Made Ill By Hospital Meal

Cranston, R. I., Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Rhode Island State Hospital authorities reported tonight 250 inmates had been stricken "violently ill" by food poisoning.

The illness was attributed to boiled tongue served at the midday meal. The victims, including 150 men and 100 women, were stricken during the visiting hour. Officials said "99 per cent of them will be up and around tomorrow."

Chute-Jumper Killed.

Easton, Pa., Sept. 4 (A.P.).—Harry Dalrymple, 30, Phillipsburg, N. J., parachute-jumper, plummeted 2,000 feet to his death late today in view of more than 1,000 persons at the Penn-Jersey Airport. His two parachutes failed to open in an exhibition.

Hull Stays on Job To Keep Eye on Crisis in Europe

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of State Hull intends to forego the labor holiday to keep in closest touch with the central European situation, it was learned yesterday.

He is scheduled to go to his office this morning to read the long dispatches coming in from American embassies and legations in Europe.

Speculation at the State Department is centering around what Chancellor Adolf Hitler will say in the speeches he is scheduled to make this week at the Nuremberg conference of the Nazi Party.

On the one hand, it is feared Hitler may make belligerent oratorical attacks on Czechoslovakia; on the other, it is hoped he may utter a word of moderation to calm Europe.

Woman Stabbed, Seriously Hurt; Another Jailed

Stabbed in the back and slashed on the chest by another woman, Mary Healy, 38, of the 400 block of K street northwest, was in critical condition in Emergency Hospital last night. She refused to identify her assailant.

Police arrested Gertrude T. Economon, 28, of the 1200 block N street northwest, and charged her with assault with a dangerous weapon.

The knifing followed an argument in a beer garden at Sixth and G streets northwest, according to police. Bystanders said a woman rushed from the restaurant and left in a taxicab.

British Plane Wrecks 3 Houses, Explodes, Kills 10, Injures 19

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 4.—A Royal Air Force plane, crashing in a densely populated London suburb, today spread a trail of death, fire and wreckage in one of the most extraordinary air tragedies in the history of British aviation.

Ten persons, including the pilot, who was the only occupant of the plane, were killed and 19 others injured, 12 of them gravely.

The plane crashed into a house, fell to the street and killed a boy playing in the road when the pilot, Sergt. S. R. Morris, lost altitude over the suburb of Edmonton.

Then it bounced to the roof of another house and burst into flames.

One woman died in the blaze started by the airplane, which badly damaged three houses.

While residents were attempting to free the trapped pilot, the plane exploded. The blast killed another boy and injured many of a crowd that quickly gathered around the wreck. Six died later in a hospital.

Pieces of the plane were blown over the neighborhood.

Men, women and children, in the street when the plane exploded, were sprayed by blazing gasoline and burned like torches as they ran.

Amateur Diving Helmet Fails, Youth Suffocates

Kansas City, Sept. 4 (A.P.).—Donald A. Harris, 20, suffocated today while walking on the bottom of Lake Lotawana, near here in a homemade diving helmet, built from an old hot water tank.

William Pipes, 19, said he and a companion pulled Harris in from 40 feet of water when they heard nothing over his telephone for several minutes. He died soon afterward.

Father Climbs Down Into Well In Vain Attempt to Save Son, 4

The child, Francis E. Brady, jr., disappeared while playing in the yard of his home on Sargent road northeast, near the District line. Mr. and Mrs. Brady searched surrounding fields and questioned neighbors. One, Mrs. W. H. Daniels, told them she had seen the boy playing near the well.

FRANCIS BRADY, Jr.

Returning home, the father noticed a loose board in the well cover, entered the well and climbed down a pipe. Meanwhile, Fire Rescue Squad No. 1 arrived and threw Brady a grappling hook.

This the father dropped into the water until it engaged in the boy's clothing.

Firemen pulled the body to the surface and applied an inhalator.

An hour-long attempt at resuscitation failed. An autopsy probably will be performed today to determine if the boy died of drowning or injuries.

Park Policeman Saves Woman in Tidal Basin Dive

Park Policeman John Compton yesterday saved a middle-aged woman from drowning. Compton saw Mrs. Dorothy Magee, 59, of 516 H street northwest, jump into the Tidal Basin from a breakwater near the Paul Jones Monument. In full uniform, he dived in after her and held her afloat until a boat arrived.

Compton said he had watched Mrs. Magee walking on the breakwater and had become suspicious of her actions. When she jumped, he paused only long enough to discard his gun and watch before plunging into the water.

Mrs. Magee was taken to Emergency Hospital for treatment and later transferred to Gallinger Hospital for observation. Friends of the woman told police she had been in ill health.

Green, Lewis Recriminations Hail Labor Day

Each Takes Credit for Labor's Gains; Thomas Urges Peace.

By the Associated Press.

The chieftains of labor's warring camps, John L. Lewis and William Green, each claimed credit yesterday for labor legislation enacted in the last year and exchanged bitter words regarding each other's organization.

Their conflict was renewed in statements issued on the eve of Labor Day.

Mme. Perkins Lists Gains.

In another statement Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, reviewed progress of labor in the last five years. She listed:

Passage of the wage-hour act, the social security act and the labor relations act.

An advance in building construction from $24,100,000 in March, 1938, to $182,900,000 in July, 1938.

In New York Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for Governor and chairman of the board of the League for Industrial Democracy, said labor's "own ruthless civil war" is a greater menace to progress and the wellbeing of the workers than anything enemies of unionism among employers can do.

Green, president of the A. F. of L., referring to the "efforts of a rebel group to build up a dual labor organization," declared A. F. of L. objectives were in line with democratic ideals.

"We have stood solidly against the principles and practices of communism," he added.

Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O., retorted:

"The C. I. O. was born of the complacency and inertia of those who had so long assumed direction of the labor movement in America, who insisted that labor unions must be patterned on craft distribution, and who denounced as heretical any effort toward industrial organization.

"They have met our efforts to organize the unorganized with sneers, reprisals, sabotage and villification. Professing a desire for unity, they have engaged in a civil war to destroy the labor movement which the C. I. O. has carried to such extraordinary success."

A. F. of L. Membership Grows.

Frank Morrison, secretary-treasurer of the A. F. of L., said that his organization had gained more than 1,130,000 members since it suspended ten C. I. O. unions.

E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, the political arm of the C. I. O., declared his organization had such success in the 1938 primaries that today labor's "political prestige exceeds that of any other period in labor history."

Thomas said none of labor's fundamental problems has yet been solved.

"With 10,000,000 more people in our country than in 1928," he said, "with four times as many unemployed, we are only now recovering the productivity of that year. We have more unemployed than all the rest of the world put together and in many areas, despite some real progress in social legislation, relief is tragically inadequate, and actual crisis draws near. . . .

"The workers want peace! As proof of that desire, as evidence of their capacity to prevail against fascism, let them before next Labor Day bring peace within their own ranks."

New Deal Assailed.

Instead of promoting labor's interests, the New Deal is "profoundly hostile" to them, "sacrificing labor to politics and politics to an ever-growing itch for power," Amos Pinchot, liberal lawyer and publicist, told John L. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O., in a 30-page criticism of the Roosevelt Administration released for Labor Day publication.

"Today, though it does not yet realize this, labor must contend with a power—and I do not refer to communism—which is more dangerous and more destructive in its possibilities than anything it has met in the past," Pinchot wrote.

"A force profoundly hostile to labor's interests has appeared in this country for the first time. This force is political centralization. It is an all-powerful and overambitious Federal Government, which is sacrificing labor to politics—and politics to an ever-growing itch for power.

Labor's Greatest Threat.

"I repeat that, for all its promises and high-sounding phrases, the present Government—that is to say Mr. Roosevelt's Government, for it certainly is his— carries a greater threat to labor than any economic or political force that has confronted labor at any time in America's history. . . .

"I say this because—partly through a passion for experimenting in self-defeating, socialist reforms, but mainly in order to gain more and more power—the New Deal Government is overplaying the political game of seeking labor's vote by attacking and discrediting industry.

"And, with its already vast powers, it has carried this attack to a point where industry is being paralyzed and the birthright of American labor, which is its opportunity to find work and make a living, is being impaired."

Inquiry Absolves TVA, Says Schwartz

By the Associated Press.

Senator Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming, a member of the TVA investigating committee, gave the Government power and planning agency a clean bill of health yesterday.

The Senator, usually an Administration supporter, told reporters that seven weeks of investigations and hearings in the TVA area had "developed nothing that might be called critical of the Administration."

Schwartz said the ten-member committee had about half completed its inquiry into the "power yardstick and accounting practices of TVA.

As the Chief Executive yesterday began a tour of Maryland he hoped would swing the tide in favor of his New Deal friend, Representative Lewis over Senator Tydings in the primaries September 12. Above—The President views proposed site for new Potomac River bridge on a farm at Laidlow's Ferry occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Hardesty. Hardesty, hidden from view, is holding up his daughter, Margaret, while his wife talks with Mr. Roosevelt. Bottom—Lewis puffs at his cigar while the President mops the perspiration from his brow as the party halts at Laidlow's Ferry.

Potomac River in this neighborhood.'

The bridge, he said, was needed not only to facilitate travel between Maryland and Virginia, but also in the interest of national defense.

He said the whole Chesapeake Bay area was a vital link in America's national defense scheme, and that bridges were peace insurance.

Silent on "Purge."

The President did not mention Lewis today. On the way down from Washington, however, "Little Davey" sat in the open car between the President and Harry Nice, Republican Governor of Maryland. Representative Stephen Gambrill, who represents southern Maryland in the House, also rode in the Presidential car.

Gov. Nice told Mr. Roosevelt the Potomac bridge would facilitate movement of troops and munitions along the seaboard by opening up a route avoiding large cities. He said a naval depot across the river at Dahlgren would be only 40 miles from Washington by way of the bridge, whereas it now is 80 miles by road through Virginia.

In the next car were Postmaster General James A. Farley, Senator F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin, and Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, of Maryland's Eastern Shore.

Farley Wires Smith, Downey.

Duffy said he expected to give the President a report on the Wisconsin political situation aboard the yacht. Duffy must buck the political strength of Senator La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive, who has announced he would support the Progressive senatorial candidate.

Farley told newspapermen he had sent telegrams to Senator E. D. Smith, of South Carolina, and Sheridan Downey, of California, who won Democratic senatorial nominations over men supported by Mr. Roosevelt. Downey defeated Senator McAdoo and Smith beat Gov. Olin Johnston.

At Morgantown, all but Nice and Gambrill boarded the yacht Potomac for an overnight cruise in Chesapeake Bay. Tomorrow morning the President will debark at this famous crab center, and start on a long motor journey up the Eastern Shore peninsula to Goldsborough's home town of Denton.

Tydings Attack Expected.

At Denton tomorrow, Mr. Roosevelt is expected to praise Representative Lewis as a liberal, belabor Senator Tydings as a reactionary and call for a realignment of liberals and conservatives, irrespective of party labels.

Nice disclosed later, at Westminster, that President Roosevelt intends to visit the Governor's mansion in Annapolis when he returns from the Eastern Shore tomorrow.

He said Mr. Roosevelt had expressed a desire to see the house, recently restored.

In his journey into Southern Maryland today, the President entered what has been regarded as strong Tydings territory.

The invasion of southern Maryland, which Tydings has compared to the "carpet-bagging" tactics of northerners following the Civil War, comes only three days after Mr. Roosevelt signified willingness to back "liberal" Republican candidates against conservative Democrats in the fall elections. Presaging the possible future alignment of political parties into two camps—liberal and conservative—and the destruction of present party lines, the proposal has met with some stiff Democratic objection, including that of Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, and the Democratic congressional campaign committee, which announced it would not go along with the President.

Meantime Representative Fish (Republican), New York, who represents the President's home district, assailed Mr. Roosevelt's Maryland invasion as an attempt to "dictate" to the State's wage earners the way they should vote. He said the issue was whether the people of Maryland, New York and Georgia wanted to continue the system of representative government or bow to "one-man supergovernment and control through regimentation, reprisal and partisan use of relief funds."

More than in either Georgia or New York the Maryland primary confronts Mr. Roosevelt with the severest test of his personal and political prestige. Involved also is the prestige of Postmaster General Farley, who has supported the President in the Maryland purge, although he reportedly has been lukewarm toward Presidential intervention in other primaries. Farley, however, has failed thus far to inject himself directly into the fray.

The Maryland test comes first, followed by Georgia and then New York, which ballots September 20.

As President Roosevelt was driving onto the dock at Morgantown, after his talk, a newspaper reporter asked a spectator how Charles County was going to vote.

Greeted at District Line.

The most enthusiastic gathering of New Dealers met the Presidential caravan of 14 cars on Good Hope road at the District line. The President ordered a halt and shook hands and chatted while the Sandy Spring band played "Maryland, My Maryland."

A sign, strung over the road, read "Welcome to Maryland, Mr. President."

There were other such signs at almost every settlement on the way down—at Waldorf, La Plata, Lothair, Laidlow's Ferry Farm and Morgantown.

At the Laidlow's Ferry Farms, Maryland terminus of the proposed bridge, the President picked up at least one vote for Lewis. It was that of Vernon Hardesty, a strapping young farmer. The other day Hardesty told a Post reporter that he was "on the fence."

Today the President greeted Hardesty, his wife and their 17-month-old baby, Margaret Anne. He asked about their farm—the tobacco, corn and other crops.

Afterward Hardesty was asked where he stood.

"Well," he said, smiling, "I guess I'll have to vote for his man."

The President viewed the site of the proposed bridge and looked over plans spread before him by Nathan L. Smith, chief engineer of the State Roads Commission.

Introduced by Gambrill.

The President said:

"My friends, this is no new visit of mine to southern Maryland. When I was in the Navy Department a great many years ago I used to come down by water. In those days it was very difficult to get down here by land. Today things have changed very greatly.

"I remember that more than ten years ago two old friends of mine became greatly interested in connecting tidewater Virginia with southern Maryland. One of them was Steve Gambrill and the other one was Walton Moore, who is now counselor of the State Department. I became interested when I came to Washington again in 1933. I came down here today, on a Sunday morning, because I think that Sunday is a good day to try to do something for one's neighbors. You are neighbors of us in the National Capital.

Sees National Value.

"For a long time I have been looking at maps, as you know, and for a long time I have felt that there ought to be, for the good not only of the people of southern Maryland but also for the good of the people of the United States, a through road from Baltimore to Richmond—a cut-off if you like—a road which, at the same time, would open up to the general traveling public—and we are traveling more and more every year—open up this very wonderful section of our country, a country that is good to look at, that is lived in by people who are good citizens. And so I have been very much interested in it, not only from the point of you good people who live down here but also because as President of the United States one of my duties is to try to take care of things as far as I can that represent national needs.

"There is one other phase of this proposed bridge across the Potomac, and of the other bridges that are proposed farther up the Chesapeake, and that is the phase of national defense.

"I suppose there is no nation in the world whose people are more peace-loving than the people of the United States. I suppose there is no nation in the world that is more sincerely desirous of keeping out of war. At the same time, you and I know what world conditions are and we do have to think sometimes of the national defense against some emergency that may come through no fault of our own in the days to come.

Chesapeake Area "Vital."

"And it is very important in thinking of national defense to see to it that the borders of the United States, the portions of the United States that lie fairly close to the seaboard, shall have proper access in the event of war, access for the conduct of defensive operations. Therefore, the whole Chesapeake Bay area is a very vital link in our national defense, and the more that we can do to improve communications in this area in peacetime, the more insurance we are taking out in the event of some possible future invasion.

"I am having a very wonderful day getting more acquainted with a portion of the country that I knew before. As you know, I very often go up and down the river on week-ends—week-ends when I try not only to rest but also to think things over quietly. And today I am getting a thrill out of this morning's ride. I have been talking with your Representatives—with the Governor of the State—and I think we are all one in feeling that this proposed bridge is one of the things that has got to be done just as fast as we can possibly do it.

"And so I hope to come back, perhaps before I leave Washington, to talk at the inauguration, the starting of this bridge across the Potomac River in this neighborhood."

8,000 Recruits Sought by Army For Next Year

By the Associated Press.

The Army wants 8,000 more enlisted men next year to man the new planes, tanks and antiaircraft guns now being made.

Informed persons disclosed yesterday that the War Department has included in its budget estimates for the fiscal year, starting next July 1, a request for funds to pay 173,000 men instead of the present 165,000.

Congress this year increased the Regular Army's strength by 3,000 men, but officials contended this was far from sufficient to meet requirements of the near future.

War planes are being delivered by manufacturers at the rate of two each working day. A fund of $23,000,000 made available this year will provide 230 of the most modern antiaircraft guns. These, along with range finders, searchlights and other equipment, call for large skilled crews.

20 New Tanks Slated.

Twenty new medium-sized tanks are expected to be completed in the next 12 months. Other measures to put the Army on wheels are adding equipment almost daily. All require more men, officials said.

Of the proposed increase, about 3,000 would go to new antiaircraft regiments, of which the Army hopes to have 34 fully organized and equipped within the next few years. Others would be allocated to the Air Corps and other branches.

When the Air Corps reaches its full quota of 2,320 modern planes by mid-1940, Congress has been told, it will need 24,988 enlisted men to man and service them. In anticipation of the additional requirements, Congress authorized an increase in strength to 21,500, and President Roosevelt is empowered to increase this to 24,725.

More Pilots Wanted.

In addition to the increase in enlisted men, the War Department wants authorization to increase to 1,304 the number of reserve pilots on extended active duty.

Only about 600 of the reserve pilots now are on active duty, and 200 of these are to receive permanent positions in the Air Corps about October 1.

A Regular Army of 173,000 men would be in addition to about 8,000 in the Philippine Scouts, who are limited to insular duty; more than 200,000 in the National Guard, and approximately 12,500 officers.

The last Congress authorized a gradual increase in officers to more than 14,000.

Fight Communism As Well as Fascism, Leader Begs Jews

Antwerp, Belgium, Sept. 4 (AP).—A change in "Jewish methods of propaganda" to offset communism as well as fascism was advocated today before the Palestine Foundation Fund Conference here.

Addressing 120 delegates from 20 nations, Dr. Kurt Blumenfield, director of the fund, declared:

"We have been unable to counter Communist as well as Nazi propaganda. We ought to constitute a body of specialized propagandists and keep aloof from what I call the spiritual slavery into which Jewish youth, as well as that of many other countries, is being driven.

"Liberty of thought must be safeguarded even if it causes discontent among certain Jewish quarters . . . Zionism is more in need of ideology than of money."

Browder Supports 'Roosevelt Party'

Portland, Oreg., Sept. 4 (AP).—Speaking before more than 1,000 members of the Communist Party, sympathizers and other visitors, Earl Browder, national executive secretary of the Communist Party in America, today advised his followers to support the New Deal in coming elections.

He said there were only two major parties today, the Roosevelt party and the anti-Roosevelt party.

He thanked the Dies investigation for "giving the Communist Party $10,000,000 worth of advertising."

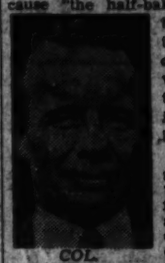
Col. Roosevelt Blames Unemployment Problem on New Deal 'Barrier' to Prosperity.

By the Associated Press.

St. Charles, Ill., Sept. 4.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt today declared 12,000,000 Americans were idle because "the half-baked policies of the New Deal theoists have definitely prevented the return of prosperity on a sound basis."



COL. ROOSEVELT.

Terming their unemployment the "one tragic fact that overshadows all others in this country," the son of former President "Teddy" Roosevelt asserted in an address prepared for delivery before Republicans attending a rally at a fall festival:

"Prosperity cannot return while public money is being squandered, while business is being persecuted, while the value of our currency is uncertain, while the powers of Federal Government are not used to forward the good of the many, but to reward its henchmen and persecute its opponents."

* * * *

Representative Drewry, of Virginia, chairman of the Democratic Congressional committee, said yesterday a Nation-wide survey indicated the party's net loss of House seats in the fall elections would not exceed 25.

"We believe," he added in a statement to the press, "that it will be the smallest net loss in the history of midterm elections in the second administration of any President of any party."

The Virginian replied to Republican predictions of House gains ranging from 40 to 70 seats.

Declaring 285 Democratic House members had been renominated thus far this year, and only 12 unseated, Drewry said records of past elections indicated definitely that any major overturn of Congressional majorities first showed itself in primary defeats of sitting members.

On a statement issued by the Democratic National Committee, Representative Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, challenged a statement he attributed to Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, that the country would be out of the business recession within a month if the existing economic system were given "a chance to forge ahead in the spirit of free enterprise" within the "minimums of essential Federal regulation."

Anderson contended business not only had been given "a chance" but also the "enormous assistance of the Federal Government."

Listing numerous benefits which he said had accrued to business from the Government's spending programs, Anderson added no "brake" had been put on business progress.

"It has its chance now to 'forge ahead in the spirit of free enterprise,'" he asserted, "and it should consult at once with Senator Vandenberg to learn how it can be accomplished in a month."

Declaring that "this Nation cannot afford to have a Congress that will merely 'rubber stamp' the President's foreign policy," Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, in an editorial in the current issue of Peace Action, called on the voters of America to elect to Congress this fall "independent men and women of all parties who will be a check on the President and who can be depended upon to keep America out of foreign wars."

Comparing the world situation today with that of 1916, Libby said, "The kind of Congressmen the people elect this year will go far to determine whether or not next year will be another 1917. Peace towers in importance this fall above all other issues. The greatest contribution this country can make to the prevention of war abroad is to stay out of Europe's game of power politics."

Hines Trial Jury To Hear More on Checks Tuesday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 4.—Mrs. Rose Wendroff, sister and one-time secretary of J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, will return to the witness stand Tuesday as the James J. Hines lottery conspiracy trial enters its fourth week. Mrs. Wendroff must face additional cross-examination on her testimony of last week, in which she said she delivered sums of money to Hines several times, and gave him a check in June, 1934.

The veteran Tammany leader is on trial in supreme court before Justice Ferdinand Pecora and a special jury, charged with having been the political protector of a conspiracy organized in 1932 by the late Dutch Schultz, gang leader, to take over the Harlem policy or numbers racket.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey has presented about 40 witnesses in the first three weeks of the case and 10 or 12 are still to testify. Dewey will need two or three days to wind up his case, and the defense expects to take at least two weeks.

in the Mexican reply, quoted the constitutions of Czechoslovakia and Germany as affirming the right of expropriation and spoke of many other countries carrying out agrarian reforms similar to those being worked out in Mexico.

Hull's proposal that money be placed in escrow beginning immediately was termed "unacceptable" because Mexico "considers it incompatible with the good faith and mutual confidence which should govern the stipulations of an arrangement of this character."

Class War False Theme for Labor, Says A.F.L. Head

Providence, R. I., Sept. 4 (AP).—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a pulpit address here today attacked those who preach the inevitability of class hatred in labor-capital relations.

"If capital and labor are to carry on a relentless industrial class warfare," he said, "then religion and ethics have failed, the rule of righteousness in human responsibility has been destroyed. The American Federation of Labor steadfastly refuses to embrace such a philosophy or to accept such a pessimistic theory."

Green said the most prolific cause of industrial strife rises out of the distribution of the earnings of industry. "Justice would require that there be an equitable and fair distribution of the earnings of industry," he said.

Green spoke on "Labor and Religion" at Cavalry Baptist Church.

Dr. Butler Holds Third Term Peril To U. S. Freedom

New York, Sept. 4 (AP).—A Presidential third term was held "contrary to America's fundamental national policy" by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, in an address today.

He quoted a House resolution adopted in 1875, which termed any departure from the no-third-term policy as "unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our free institutions."

"This resolution," Dr. Butler said, "has amended the Constitution in fact, although not in form . . . It has become the expression of a national policy which must be looked upon as fundamental."

Radical Poll Favors Ickes, Jackson in '40

Communists Prefer Liberal, Hold Third-Term Tradition Unimportant.

A survey of radical thought, as expressed by Communist and left-wing spokesmen, indicated yesterday that the tendency in those circles at present is to look most favorably upon Solicitor General Jackson or Secretary Ickes for the 1940 Democratic Presidential nomination.

For the most part representatives of these groups sounded on the question of their attitude toward a third term for Mr. Roosevelt dismissed it as too far in the future to arouse interest at present. They expressed the viewpoint that, for the current year, radical interest centered in trends as between "liberal" and "conservative" groups.

Hopkins Also Favored.

In addition to Jackson and Ickes, names mentioned as acceptable to left-wingers for the 1940 nomination included those of Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, and Gov. Frank Murphy, of Michigan. Secretary Wallace, Secretary Hull and Postmaster General Farley were mentioned as "unacceptable" to right-wingers, with possible exception of Farley, on the ground that they are regarded as "New Deal men."

None of those mentioned was in any way classified as a Communist. They were discussed, rather, as men regarded as "liberals" who, from the radical viewpoint, would be more satisfactory than others who have been mentioned as contenders for the 1940 nomination. The views were expressed in response to inquiries addressed to editors of Communist and other left-wing publications and organizations, by Joseph Lieb, of Washington.

C. A. Hathaway, editor of the Daily Worker, of New York, Communist Party organ, wrote: "Through my contact, chiefly with the workers' movement, in many sections of the country, it is my impression that the workers of the country are little concerned with abstract discussions about a third or fourth term, or what not . . . They will answer the question of who carries the banner of this social legislation only in 1940."

A. B. Magil, editor of the New Masses, Communist weekly newspaper in New York City, made this observation: "Those that I come in contact with would favor a man like Jackson or Ickes in 1940 rather than any of the others who have been mentioned."

Paul Crouch, editor of The New South, published in Birmingham, as the Communist organ in the South, said:

"The names now mentioned (Ickes, Jackson, Wallace, Farley and Hull) are all regarded as New Deal men and are all undesirable and unacceptable to the 'right' wing forces, with a slight possibility they might accept Mr. Farley. Other New Deal people who should be on the list of possibilities are Gov. Murphy of Michigan and Hopkins."

SSees Precedent Unimportant.

Steve Nelson, of the American League for Peace and Democracy, wrote: "My impression in reference to the question of the third term is that the labor people, in particular, are not worrying so much about the past traditions regarding this question, but rather are more concerned with the problem of who will serve them best from the standpoint of their economic needs."

A spokesman for the American Labor Party who did not wish to be quoted expressed suspicion that "this third term interest is being fostered in part by the enemies of the President," and said his organization had no wish to encourage them by adding fuel to fire.

The Workers Alliance of America, left-wing organization of WPA workers, replied to the inquiry as to its viewpoint by saying that the question of a possible third term for President Roosevelt would be discussed and decided upon at its national convention, September 23-26, at Cleveland.

24,000 Homes Built Last Year As U.S. Projects

37,000 Family Units Are Now Provided by Federal Agencies.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—Approximately 24,000 new dwelling units were made available for occupancy in the Nation's large-scale housing projects in the past year, the National Association of Housing Officials reported today. With the 13,500 living units previously reported, nearly 37,000 families now make their homes in Federal aided projects located in all parts of the country.

The association's annual project map, just completed, shows occupancy of 146 projects as of May 1, 1938, compared with 58 for May 1, 1937. Tenants are now living in 51 housing projects financed by the housing division of the Public Works Administration and its successor, the United States Housing Authority; in 82 farm security administration projects, and in 13 large-scale rental projects financed through the Federal Housing Administration.

The map showed that the three list other projects, approved or under construction, which will provide 25,000 more homes. The USHA lists 23 such projects; the FHA rental housing division, 62, and the FSA, 2. Since May 1 USHA contracts have been approved for 21 cities, which would supplement the total by nearly 21,000 dwelling units.

Large-scale housing projects dot 36 of the States, with the greatest concentration in the East and Southeast. States lacking such projects are: Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Delaware, North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho, Utah, Oregon, Nevada and Wyoming.

Interest in forwarding housing plans is displayed in many of these States, anticipating the legislative sessions of early 1939, when cities of 15 States must make secure their participation in benefits of the housing act with enabling legislation. Meantime, construction of projects under FHA aid is rapid, owing to recent changes in rental provisions of the housing act, which provide wide use of mortgage insurance facilities for large projects.

Typhoon Strikes Kobe, Japan, and Sweeps on Osaka

Tokyo (Monday), Sept. 5 (U.P.).—A typhoon, the second to hit Japan within a week, struck the great seaport of Kobe at 2 p. m. today with a velocity of 46 miles per hour.

It was reported that the typhoon's maximum might reach about 90 miles per hour.

It struck Cape Muroto on Shikoku Island this morning.

New Glider Mark Is Set in Contest By Detroit Woman

Frankfort, Mich., Sept. 4 (AP).—Mrs. Helen Montgomery, pretty Detroit glider pilot, set a new American women's endurance record today when she remained aloft over Crystal Downs for 7 hours 22 minutes in the American Open meet here.

Another Detroiter, Elmer Zook, landed shortly after sundown, still short of bettering the men's endurance record, after a flight of 10 hours 21 minutes.

2 Seized in Stoning Of Trucks in Strike

Arrested at Bladensburg and Queens Chapel roads northeast Saturday night, two Baltimore men were charged with disorderly conduct after Motorcycle Policeman H. C. Wright accused them of hurling stones at passing trucks.

The suspects gave their names as Clarence Bevans, 32, and Edward Carter, 24, and each posted $25 collateral.

In the last few days, 19 others have been arrested at Baltimore and Fredericksburg, Va., in connection with the strike of 2,000 truck drivers in Baltimore. Negotiations to end the strike collapsed Saturday.

The Coast Guard here said Wilson apparently was suffering from pneumonia. The Musa was on her way from New York to Colon, Canal Zone.

Cardinal Hayes, Head of Richest Archdiocese, Dies in Sleep at 70 of the worshipers to offer a silent prayer, then stood without speaking for a half minute before stepping down fro mthe pulpit.

An audible gasp ran through the huge edifice., It was followed by a hush which Father Hammer later described as being "the most profound silence I have ever heard."

Magistrate Edgar Bromberger, a Jew, delayed the opening of night court tonight and, while the spectators stood, read a eulogy of Cardinal Hayes, expressing his "profound sorrow" at his death and appreciation of the work of rehabilitation carried on under the cardinal's direction in the courts of the city.

Studied at Catholic U.

The body of Cardinal Hayes will be taken to the cardinal's residence on Madison avenue, where it will lie in state until Tuesday, when it will be moved to St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Final services, a solemn pontifical requiem mass, will be celebrated Friday at 10:30 a. m.

The public will be admitted to the cardinal's residence as well as the cathedral, where it is expected the people of the archdiocese will manifest their veneration for the memory of the "Cardinal of charity" in scenes similar to those enacted during the period of mouring for his predeceasor, John Cardinal Farley.

The Right Rev. Michael J. Lavelle, 82-year-old vicar-general of the archdiocese and rector of the cathedral, who delivered the funeral sermon for Cardinal Farley, will preach at the solemn requiem mass at 10:30 a. m., Thursday, to be attended by members of religious orders of the archdiocese.

Will Rest in Cathedral.

Funeral plans for Cardinal Hayes were formulated by the consultors, a group of monsignori headed by the Most Rev. Stephen J. Donahue, auxiliary bishop of New York, who will later designate a temporary administrator to serve until the Pope names Cardinal Hayes' successor as archbishop.

On Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. a mass will be celebrated for the children, at which the Most Rev. James E. Kearney, Bishop of Rochester, will preach the sermon. Members of religious orders under the jurisdiction of the late cardinal will attend the Thursday mass.

The climax of the funeral ceremonies will be the pontifical mass Friday at which ranking members of the American ecclesiastical hierarchy are expected to be present.

Cardinal Hayes will be placed in the crypt beneath the main altar of the cathedral in company with the two archbishops and the two cardinals who preceded him as administrators of the archdiocese of New York.

As a young priest, Cardinal Hayes studied theology at Catholic University in 1894. Informed of the prelate's passing, the Right Rev. Mgr. Joseph Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, said the institution "has deep reason for grieving in the death of its most distinguished alumnus."

Visited Capital.

"Cardinal Hayes," he recalled, "has been a true and loyal friend of Catholic University all through his years as Archbishop of New York and the university sounds a most earnest note in the general chorus of lamentation which follows his death."

The churchman was an occasional visitor in Washington during the World War, when, as Auxiliary Bishop of New York, he was appointed chaplain general, directing Roman Catholic chaplains in all the services.

He became Archbishop of New York in 1919 after the death of Cardinal John M. Farley. Five years later in Rome he received the red hat of a cardinal, in company with George Mundelein, then Archbishop of Chicago, who had been a classmate at the De la Salle Institute almost half a century before.

Interest in Irish Affairs.

Although his occasional public statements were characterized by great reserve, Cardinal Hayes made his influence felt on numerous social, political and economic questions.

Proud of his Irish ancestry, he took an active interest in the establishment of the Irish Free State, lending aid to Eamon de Valera when that ascetic school teacher, born on New York City's East Side, returned to America to raise funds.

"Whatever Ireland gets will be due in a measure to the efforts of Archbishop Hayes," said one Irish leader during the troubled period of negotiation and armed conflict with Great Britain from 1918 to 1922. But when De Valera's opposition to the Free State government later seemed to threaten civil war, the cardinal cabled Archbishop Byrne of Dublin that armed conflict would shock America and cost Ireland many friends.

Robert Brennan, Irish Minister to the United States, said in Washington:

"I was terribly sorry personally to hear of Cardinal Hayes' death. He was always a good friend of Ireland. Prime Minister de Valera has cabled me to request that I represent the Irish nation at the funeral."

Sympathy With New Deal.

During the Roosevelt regime Cardinal Hayes had been known as a sympathetic observer of much New Deal legislation, in which he saw practical application of the famous papal encyclicals on modern economic problems, issued by Leo XIII and Pius XI.

In his first formal interview for six years, given last March, the prelate awakened a lively controversy when he told reporters he was praying daily for Gen. Franco to win the Spanish civil war because he believed "the loyalist side is controlled by radicals and Communists." He added he expected Franco to win very soon.

The cardinal's views on temperance were widely quoted. "The Catholic Church stands always for temperance," he said. "There are the virtues of justice, fortitude and prudence, and temperance fits in with these three. If an individual can't be temperate, but abuses liquor, he is bound by conscience flows out of intemperance, there must be prohibtiion, but that doesn't mean that such prohibition should apply to all."

In April, 1937, when the burlesque houses of New York were seeking renewal of their licenses, Cardinal Hayes wrote to the license commissioner: "Information has come to me of the spread, evil influence and destructive results from these disgraceful and pernicious performances."

A few days later burlesque was banned.

In December, 1935, an advent sermon against birth control, which he delivered at the cathedral, involved Cardinal Hayes in a controversy with some leaders of the Protestant and Jewish faiths. A public statement signed by 13 clerics, including Bishop Francis McConnell, Methodist, of Pittsburgh; the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick and Rabbi Sidney Goldstein, rebuked him as trying to dictate to other faiths and held his "race sucide" views were "baseless." In reply, Cardinal Hayes made public a statement repeating the attack on birth control and charging its backers with ignoring morals and misuing science.

Born in 1867.

Patrick Hayes was born November 20, 1867, in City Hall place near the foot of Manhattan Island. In later years he became a close friend of Al Smith, who lived a few blocks to the east.

His mother, Mary Gleeson Hayes, died when the future cradinal was 4, and his father, Daniel Hayes, a truckman, a few years later. Both his parents were Irish immigrants.

It was the boy's aunt, Ellen Egan, with whom he went to live after his mother's death, who decided he had a "calling" to the priesthood and made the necessary sacrifices for his education. After schooling at the De la Salle Institute, he went on to Manhattan College, receiving the bachelor of arts degree in 1888. He then attended St. Joseph's Seminary at Troy, N. Y., and was ordained a priest in 1892.

Cardinal Hayes was never pastor of a parish. After his ordination, he was assigned to Mgr. Farley, then pastor of St. Gabriel's Church in New York City. When his superior was made auxiliary bishop in 1897, Father Hayes became his secretary, and with the elevation of Bishop Farley to archbishop in 1903, the 36-year-old cleric became chancellor of the diocese. He was consecrated auxiliary bishop October 28, 1914.

As archbishop five years later, he first gained wide attention for his active interest in charitable enterprises. His first innovation was creation of the Catholic Charities Fund, which has since collected and distributed nearly $20,000,000. In the years he wore scarlet robes and red beret he was to be known as the "Cardinal of Charities."

Thought With the Poor.

"I was born among the very poor people in the lower part of New York," the cardinal once said, "and my thought and love have always been with them."

In Washington today Mgr. John O'Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, declared that "in the life of Cardinal Hayes we have the finest contribution of the Catholic Church to American social welfare."

"He was truly dedicated to the poor and underprivileged. He and his disciples struggled during a quarter of a century to have American Government recognize its responsibilities toward the poor."

The cardinal loved the metropolis in whose service he spent his life. Immediately after his investiture in Rome, he cabled "my blessing to little old New York."

Greeted by Notables.

When Gov. Smith, Mayor Hyland, Grover Whalen and other notables went down the bay to greet the returning cardinal, the proudest man on the city tug Macon was "Uncle Jim" Egan, long since retired from the little store across the street from the cleric's birthplace. "Aunt Ellen," who lived to see her nephew a bishop, had died in 1917.

The Cardinal's chief duties and activities derived from his office as archbishop of New York. Shunning the regal style associated with the European cardinalate, he continued the democratic policy of his predecessors in New York. He lived with extreme simplicity in the small stone episcopal residence under the rear eaves of the cathedral.

The first American-born priest to be elevated to leadership of the Archdiocese of New York, he was shepherd to 1,275,000 persons. More than 450 churches, independent of missions, chapels, schools and stations, and 1,575 priests looked to him for guidance. His archdiocese, which includes Puerto Rico and the British-owned Bahama Islands, has contributed more funds annually to the Church of Rome than all of Europe.

In the acceptance of his heavy responsibilities, the cardinal never spared himself, even after development of the heart ailment which ultimately led to his death. Since the tremendous exertion of a long address to the Eucharistic Congress in 1932, he had been attended constantly by his personal physician, Dr. Raymond P. Sullivan.

A handsome man, of medium build, slender waist and wide shoulders, he performed his duties with an unassuming dignity. His Celtic features, clear skin and blue eyes, became the scarlet robes of his office. When he came to Rome to receive the red hat from Pope Pius, an Italian cardinal said, "He looks like a boy going to receive his first communion." But cares of recent years gave the cardinal's face and figure an almost patriarchal quality as he presided over Sunday morning mass at St. Patrick's.

Although those closest to him knew the Cardinal suffered from a weak heart, the abrupt end to his long service in the church came as a profound shock.

"A Great American."

Mayor LaGuardia today characterized Cardinal Hayes as "not only a great churchman, but a great American."

Former Gov. Smith, prominent Catholic layman, said he was "deeply shocked and grieved at the sad news. A great American citizen, a wonderful friend and New York's distinguished cardinal of charity has passed on to his great reward."

Lauded by Miss Perkins.

In Washington Secretary of Labor Perkins called the cardinal "an outstanding and liberal American" whose death "is a loss to the Nation as well as to the church of which he was such a distinguished and highly regarded dignitary."

"He was loved and admired by Americans of all sects as one of the outstanding churchmen in our history. He was my good friend, and I join thousands of others in mourning his death."

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, of Washington, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore, said he knew of "no more lovable or highly esteemed prelate in the United States. Cardinal Hayes was one of nature's noblemen."

The Rev. Arthur J. O'Leary, president of Georgetown University, said church and Nation have lost "a skilled, patriotic and saintly leader."

"Cardinal Hayes was an able administrator, kindly and gracious toward all, and won the confidence of countless men of all faiths."

Fahey Kidnaper Escapes St. Paul Jail With Spoon

St. Paul, Sept. 4 (AP).—John Couch, 23, of St. Louis, Mo., confessed kidnaper of a St. Louis couple, escaped from the Ramsey County Jail late today.

With a spoon, Couch loosened a brick next to a window in his first-floor cell and dropped to the street. He was reported seen later in Minneapolis, but deputy sheriffs said the trail was lost then.

Couch was committed August 17, following his arrest at Effie, Minn., when his companion, James Meridith, 21, was fatally wounded in a gun fight with agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and a sheriff's posse. Couch and Meridith were identified by Miss Peggy Gross and Daniel C. Fahey, former Washington resident, as the pair who kidnaped them in Fahey's car in St. Louis August 13. The couple was released near Osseo, Minn., after being bound with copper wire.

made her walk several miles to the clump of brush, but she couldn't tell us where it was, because she was unable to observe the surroundings or the direction."

Cato quoted her as saying one of the men watched her while the other drove the Meeks' car to Marysville and abandoned it. She expressed the belief that the men did not have another automobile.

For a bed she had a quilt which had been taken from her home when she was carried off. She said she was kept at the hideout without food until Saturday noon, when one of the men gave her a piece of cheese and a can of water.

"One of the men left again about Saturday noon," Cato continued. "About 5:30 p. m. the other man told Mrs. Meeks he was going away for a while, but that if she attempted to get away they could "blow her brains out."

"If you stay here until the moon comes up," the abductor was quoted as saying, "we'll take you home."

Stayed 11 Hours.

The man disappeared, Cato said, and Mrs. Meeks stayed under her quilt for another 11 hours, meanwhile developing a severe nosebleed, before getting up enough courage to leave the hideout.

Near exhaustion, she left the place about 4:30 a. m. and made her way to the highway," Cato said, "and was picked up by Foster."

Officers blocked access to the Meeks' home and to highways in the search area and no one was permitted to see Mrs. Meeks.

Prosecutor's Statement.

Hewitt's statement said:

"Mrs. Meeks was returned home this a. m. at about 6:30. She left the hideout while the abductors were away, and made her way on a road until she found a man who drove her home.

"She is under a doctor's care, and neither she nor members of her family are to be disturbed.

"The sheriff's office, highway patrol and my office are conducting an investigation which we hope will lead to the capture of her abductors."

Shortly before the announcement, acquaintances of the family said Mrs. Marian Hunzeker, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Meeks, appeared in nearby Wheatland, purchased a bottle of rubbing alcohol and sped back to the home of her parents.

Witnesses reported the daughter was weeping and almost hysterical.

Newsmen appearing for an appointment with the prosecutor at the Meeks home for 10 a. m., were sent away by State highway patrolmen who said a statement by Hewitt would be given out in Marysville, 12 miles away.

About 10:30 a. m., Highway Patrol Capt. T. F. Norwood, in Marysville, read the district attorney's statement to the press. Hewitt presumably remained at the Meeks home.

Mrs. Meeks, 55, vanished from her home late Thursday night. The incident became known when her 56-year-old husband, a well-to-do orchardist, notified Sheriff Bert Ulrey that two men had entered their house, bound them both and carried off Mrs. Meeks in the couple's automboile.

Early this morning Undersheriff A. W. Kimerer reported at attempted contact had been made before midnight and that it was "unsuccessful." He did not say who attempted to contact whom, but added that the family was "very desirous" of such a meeting.

Last Year's Snow Livens Labor Day

Appleton, Wis., Sept. 4 (AP).—Snowballs whizzed up and down College avenue today, and a horse and cutter paraded the streets with its occupants in fur coats.

It all was part of a Labor Day celebration. The snow came from a deep ravine, where it was dumped last winter by street cleaners. Only twice since 1918 had the snow lasted beyond July 4.

El Monte Prefers Poker in Open to 'Monte' in Private

El Monte, Calif., Sept. 4 (AP).—Mayor Nellie E. Lemer and the city council have brought poker-playing here out into the open.

It's illegal to play at home, but five licensed card rooms operate under a recently adopted ordinance. Every 20 minutes the house collects 10 cents from each player for use of the table and his chair. The house takes nothing out of the pot and there is no other charge.

No liquor is sold or allowed in the card rooms, and minors are barred. But every Tuesday is "Ladies Day," when they play free. About one-third of the regular players are women. Dice, dominos, checkers and chess also may be played for money, but El Monte prefers poker.

Bonnet Calls On U. S. to Help Avert Conflict

By the Associated Press.

Pointe de Grave, France, Sept. 4.—Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet appealed to the United States today to "help us safeguard and organize peace."

Bonnet and William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France, spoke at the dedication to the United States participation in the World War of a towering monument at the mouth of the Gironde River, where Lafayette sailed to join Gen. Washington's army.

The foreign minister, referring to the tension over Czechoslovakia, linked solidarity between France and the United States with the close co-operation of France and Great Britain.

"I have been moved but not surprised often to hear your compatriots tell me that if France were again attacked they would come to her defense," Bonnet declared.

"But that is not what we want of you. It is not our desire that anyone help us in case of war, for we do not want war. It is our desire that you help us safeguard and organize peace."

Bullitt caused a sensation at Bordeaux last night when he declared at a banquet that France and the United States were "united in war as in peace." But after hearing Bonnet today he declared that "no human being could undertake to state or to prophesy whether or not the United States would become involved" in a general European war.

Tens of thousands, including high French government officials, heard the addresses, which were punctuated by salvos fired from a French cruiser and two destroyers cruising just off the shore.

Bonnett said France "did not seek to hide the gravity of the Czechoslovakian problem."

He expressed hope that the crisis could be solved by the world's desire for peace, recognition by Praha and Berlin of "their international responsibility" and by the co-operation of France and Britain.

He added, however, that France would remain faithful "in any event" to all her engagements and treaties. This was interpreted as a reaffirmation of France's pledge to aid Czechoslovakia in event of invasion.

There is "perhaps only one nation in which the government would be afraid to accord freedom, even of trade, to its enslaved people," Bullitt said. He gave no name but Frenchmen considered he was referring to Germany.

"The other nations," he declared, "plead that they have been forced to measures of autarchy only by lack of access to raw materials and by shrinkage of their international trade.

"Is it impossible to take them at their word and begin negotiations for their reintegration in the economic body of the world?"

Japanese Report 4 Cities Captured In Hankow Drive

Shanhai, (Monday) Sept. 5 (U.P.).—Commanders of six Japanese armies battering into the defense of Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's provisional capital in Hankow reported today they had taken four key cities and were consolidating their positions in preparation for new advances.

Foreign military attaches estimated the Japanese had more than 400,000 men in action against about 1,000,000 Chinese.

Key positions reported occupied by the Japanese were Tehan, Kwangtsi and Matouchen, in the fighting area southeast of Hankow and Wenhsien in the Yellow River area.

[K. J. Eskelund, war correspondent for the Chinese Press, who graduated from the University of Missouri School of Journalism, received a slight face wound yesterday in a Japanese air raid on Tehan, the Associated Press stated.—Editor's note.]

By the Associated Press.

The Navy Department reported yesterday the United States gunboat Oahu had been demaged slightly by a barge which broke away form a Japanese tug on the Yangtze River above Nanking. Japanese naval officers at the scene expressed regret for the accident, they said, and agreed to accept full responsibility for the necessary repairs.

King Hears Prayer For Ailing Relative

London, Sept. 4 (AP).—The condition of Prince Arthur of Connaught, son of the Duke of Connaught and grandson of Queen Victoria, was reported unchanged today after a restful night. Special prayers for the prince's recovery were read in the presence of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth today in the Crathie Parish Church, near Balmoral Castle.

ing but at the same time to hold out for original demands for autonomy and to demonstrate enough to force from the Czechs the greatest possible concessions.

The occasion for today's three meetings of Sudeten Germans was the annual harvest festival. At Asch, his birthplace, Henlein stood on the platform while George Woellner, a Sudeten Nazi member of parliament, talked to the crowd.

"In our fight," Woellner said, "there can be no compromise. The Sudeten demands for autonomy as laid down in the eight points decreed at Carlsbad are only the beginning. The Sudetens are not alone in this fight. Behind them stand 76,000,000 Germans. The German wants no war. He wants the 3,500,000 Sudtetens who form an essential part of the great German people to enjoy their full rights.

"We hate war. We carry on our fight by legal methods. Therefore, the Czechs should not again occupy our villages and others nearby in secret, while in Prague they are negotiating and Lord Runciman is there to give good advice."

Woellner's objection here presumably was to Czech troop movements ordered to protect the state during the unprecedented current German military maneuvers, although these movements have not been heavy.

At Cesky Krumlov, 2,100 heard a Sudeten Nazi senator, P. F. Rugner, speak of "Our Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler." They responded by shouting repeatedly, "We want our homeland in the Reich."

At Decin, 15,000 heard Deputy Rudolf Sandtner and Mayor Bodenbach speak. Here the crowd shouted: "We salute our Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler!"

Franco Reports Foe's Spearhead Base Has Fallen

Hendaye, France (At Spanish Frontier), Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Insurgent headquarters tonight announced capture of the fortified town of Corbera, spearhead of the Loyalists' Abro Valley salient on the Catalonian west boundary.

Corbera is 3 miles northeast of the insurgent base at Gandesa. It was the richest prize of the government's July 24 offensive which reached the walls of Gandesa before it was turned back by Gen. Franco's reinforcements.

A spokesman in Franco's Saragossa headquarters said tonight that the offensive was continuing "without relaxation."

French Frontier Leaves Canceled to Meet Nazi Threat

Paris, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—The French Government tonight canceled all furloughs of officers and troops at Strasbourg and all other points along the Maginot Line of fortifications facing Germany.

The order was issued late tonight and French troops which already had left their barracks were recalled.

The action was taken as a counter-measure to Germany's massing of troops—estimates ranged between 50,000 and 100,000—on the right bank of the Rhine behind the new German Siegfried Line.

Postal employes were ordered to remain at their posts at full strength, contrasting with the usual skeleton Sunday staffs.

Reinforcement Denied.

All leaves were canceled in the Nancy twentieth military district, which includes the fortified frontier zone south of Strasbourg from Saarbruecken to the Rhine.

In some places the German and French troops facing each other across the world's most heavily fortified border were only a few hundred yards apart.

Both nations attempted to cloak the frontier arming with secrecy, which served to heighten tension.

Behind the 150,000 "frontaliers" holding the $400,000,000 French line of steel and concrete, most of which is deep underground and capped by turrets, were 50,000 or 60,000 other troops of secondary garrisons.

The French press, in Paris and the provinces, suppressed all news of troop movements on both sides of the Rhine.

Wife Accuses Mate In Boudoir Killing

Shreveport, La., Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Mrs. Lizzit Dell Neely, pretty blonde amateur golfer, tonight accused her wealthy husband of killing her tale-bearing cousin "to shut him up."

Ed F. Neely, 47, prominent attorney and oil man, was under $1,500 bond and charged with manslaughter in connection with the gun death of Jack B. Dean, Mrs. Neely's 25-year-old cousin and professional boxer.

Mrs. Neely said Dean had told her stories of her husband's infidelity.

Neely, according to police, found Dean in an up-State bedroom of the Neely home at 4:30 a. m. Saturday morning. The attorney fired three shots at the young man, they said, after shouting: "You've played hell."

Hungary Moves To Build Army, Suppress Jews

Labor Corps, Farm Reform Also Announced After Horthy-Hitler Talk.

By the Associated Press.

Kapsovar, Hungary, Sept. 4.—Introduction of universal compulsory military training and speedy rearmament were among a number of sweeping measures announced for Hungary in a speech today by Premier Imredi.

Following the recent visit of the Premier and Regent Horthy, with Chancellor Hitler, the premier in a public address disclosed plans for a long range program embodying drastic innovations.

In addition to conscription, the program included:

Compulsory Labor Camps.

Establishment of compulsory labor camps.

Measures to increase births, including confiscation of the property after death of childless couples.

Agricultural reforms, such as division and leasing of big estates to small farmers.

The premier told 35,000 farmers, miners, and war veterans: "I will lead you from now on with a firm hand.

Denies Any Enmities.

"Our friendship with Italy and Germany is directed against no one," he declared. "As proof of this is our better understanding with the Little Entente states," he said.

He insisted, however, that permanent friendship with the Little Entente depended upon the Entente's guarantee of fairer treatment to Hungarian minority groups in these countries.

"Especially in Czechoslovakia where minorities are in the majority we will demand increased rights for Hungarian groups," he declared.

(The Little Entente, Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia scrapped clauses of the World War treaty of Trianon at Bled, Yugoslavia, August 23, which bound Hungary not to rearm, and agreed with Hungary to negotiate non-aggression pacts—completion of which depends, however, upon settlement of the minority issues.

At Norton's Musical Cocktails, the beauty chorus that has more steps than the Washington Monument, will present a set of new numbers. Spicy dance music by Bill Strickland's Dixieland Swingers, em-Caesaring by Al Norton.

Adios, McWilliams music! That's what the Glen Echo dancers will have to say at midnight tonight. Dave McWilliams and his big 13-piece orchestra are winding up their long and successful Glen Echo engagement with the huge holiday party to be staged in Echo's Spanish Ballroom this evening.

But tomorrow there'll be a new king of rhythm at Glen Echo. That's the way it goes. Little Joe Hart, who started the park's dance season with a bang, will wind it up with a final blast of musical fireworks beginning Tuesday and lasting through Saturday.

An act that always scores a bull's-eye, Parker Brothers and Lynn, will head Bamboo Gardens' new floor show. The trio's "Slave Dance" will jar your corpuscles. Virginia Barry, Washington's ace girl dancer, will be held over. That's what she rates for her precision and grace, especially in toe-stepping. New will be the McCune Sisters, Manhattan importations, who'll dance and warble.

Huey Liang, Bamboo's head man, is mapping out plans for a large and fancy fall opening in about two weeks.

Does Madrillon pick 'em! Helene Forrest who sang in the Peter Borras spot all last year is reliably reported as wavering between offers to go with Rudy Vallee or Ozzie Nelson. She's doing her wavering in Bermuda. And Agostin Borguno, who used to play piano at Madrillon, is responsible for some of the beautiful arrangements you've heard played by the Philadelphia Symphony this summer.

'Germans Abroad' Hear Loyalty Plea

Stutgart, Germany, Sept. 4 (AP).—Propaganda Minister Goebbels closed the Germans-Abroad Congress here today with the admonition to "be loyal to your guest land but keep your love for us."

Twenty thousand German dwellers in foreign lands who spent a week attending the sessions heard Goebbels attack democracies and the foreign press. He accused the latter of envy and malice and "lying slanders."

Encouraging Start.

When Elmer F. Andrews, former industrial commissioner of New York State, was selected to serve as administrator of the wage-hour law, fears that this important office might fall into the hands of an unqualified or politically minded executive were banished. Little imagination is required to picture the unhappy consequences if this new organization had been brought under the control of a man unable to resist the pressure of special interest groups, whether employers or labor unions.

The promptness with which Mr. Andrews announced his intention to work with representative committees for specific industries, taking counsel with all qualified to advise him in working out a plan of procedure, showed that he has no intention of imposing rigid legislative standards upon unprepared industries.

Now his selection of Arthur L. Fletcher to serve as assistant director and secure compliance with the law offers additional assurance that the act will be administered with intelligence and discrimination. Mr. Fletcher has an excellent record as Commissioner of Labor for North Carolina. In the initial regulation of the textile industry, he will undoubtedly have much valuable information to contribute to a solution of the problem of sectional wage differentials.

Practical knowledge of industrial relationships and administrative experience will certainly be needed to deal with those who demand immediate changes in wage-and-hour standards, regardless of economic consequences. The insistence of the president of the United Textile Workers, for example, upon a universal 40-cent hourly minimum wage for textile labor illustrates the difficulties of the problems confronting the regulatory authorities. To yield to this demand would undoubtedly create serious dislocations in the textile industry. Precisely to avert that outcome the wage-hour law was revised to give the Aministrator discretionary powers to vary conditions of employment within certain stated limits.

By announcing that he intends to proceed cautiously with the regulatory program, and by choosing as his chief assistant a man who has had similar training and doubtless shares his viewpoint, Administrator Andrews is making a good start. It gives promise of success in turning a potentially dangerous law into a regulatory measure that will permanently improve industrial standards without imposing destructive strain upon the industrial structure.

The Insurance Principle.

From Atlantic City Mr. William Green indicates that the executive council of the A. F. of L. is preparing to urge higher unemployment benefits for those out of work. The amounts now being paid by the States under standards set up by the Social Security Board, he says, are not adequate "to maintain a man and his family decently."

Of course they are not adequate for this purpose. They never were intended to be, and it may be hoped they never will be. For only hopelessly muddled thinking could lead to the conclusion that these benefits ought to take the place of regular wages and be paid for the duration of periods of unemployment regardless of their length.

To permit such changes would immediately undermine the present insurance system and result in the breakdown of the contributory arrangements upon which it is based. All students of unemployment insurance have pointed out repeatedly that the device is merely intended to alleviate the financial distress of those temporarily out of work.

For the chronically unemployed, or for those who are unable to find work within a reasonable period of time, unemployment insurance offers no relief. In this country the system is as a rule financed solely from employer contributions to an insurance fund supposed to be self-supporting. To enlarge and prolong the scale of benefits in any pronounced degree would mean scuttling the insurance principle and transforming the system into one of doles instead of payments received as a matter of right regardless of individual need.

For the unemployables, or the chronically unemployed, another kind of assistance is evidently needed. Already industries are subjected to heavy levies to help finance payments of old-age and unemployment benefits. To assess them further to provide pensions for the unemployed would be most short-sighted, forcing drastic curtailment of pay rolls.

Of course the Government will have to find funds to take care of the destitute who have exhausted their unemployment benefits or have never qualified for their receipt. But such direct payments can and should be adjusted to need and made more flexible than under an insurance system.

Moreover, the morale of temporarily unemployed workers is greatly strengthened, and their zeal to find new work heightened in the interim between jobs, if aid comes in the form of a fixed and assured payment large enough to eke out savings but not sufficient to encourage idleness.

Labor's Schism.

For the third Labor Day in succession, organized labor in the United States finds itself divided. That peace and unity which leaders both of the A. F. of L. and of the C. I. O. profess to desire seem as far away as ever. The struggle between these rival organizations grows apace, spreading from the industrial to the political sphere, with sniping and pitched battles occurring almost daily on a dozen different fronts and bitterness steadily mounting.

So far this schism in labor's ranks has resulted in no especial weakening either of the A. F. of L. or of the C. I. O. Both claim to have more than held their own during the past year, although during most of this period the Nation was in the midst of a serious industrial recession. It would seem almost as if competition between these rivals has been an incentive rather than a deterrent to mutual growth. But a more likely reason for the advances made by the opposing factions during the past years is that there is clearly room in the United States for both craft and industrial unions. In Great Britain, as the President's commission has pointed out in their recent report, both types manage to exist without any perceptible friction between them.

In the long run, neither the A. F. of L. nor the C. I. O. stands to gain much by this fratricidal strife while organized labor as a whole stands to lose a great deal. Indeed, it is not at all unlikely that the jurisdictional warfare which is at present raging in many industries may before long result in a loss of ground already gained as well as inhibiting gains that, at the moment, are still within reach.

Certainly the obstacles that once barred the way to collective bargaining have one by one been eliminated. The principle that the workers shall be permitted to organize and to deal with industry through representatives of their own choosing now has the force of a law whose constitutionality has been upheld by the Supreme Court. And there is a growing body of enlightened opinion in industry itself which feels that it is to the advantage of the employer no less than of the worker to have labor organized in strong, well-disciplined unions. But the widening schism in labor's ranks and the struggle to which this split has given rise bids fair to undermine much of what has been accomplished during recent years.

The C. I. O.'s current difficulties as well as its recent successes bear witness to the value of unity and the dangers of dissensions in the ranks of labor. Not long ago the United Mine Workers, one of the most closely knit affiliates of the C. I. O., succeeded in signing a collective bargaining agreement with the operators of Harlan County, Ky., a development rightly hailed as one of the greatest labor victories of recent years. At the same time, the organization of the workers in the automobile industry is making no progress because of the bitter internal feud within the United Automobile Workers of America.

This year, as for some years past, organized labor can look back with some satisfaction on the gains that have been achieved. In her Labor Day message, for instance, Secretary Perkins calls attention to the fact that weekly factory pay rolls rose from $77,083,000 in March, 1933, to $137,162,000 in July, 1938, while, at the same time, there was an advance in non-agricultural employment from 25,946,000 to 31,769,000.

But these and similar gains which labor has made and the opportunity which exists for further advances place a great burden of responsibility on the shoulders of labor leaders. A reckless war for mastery may satisfy the personal ambitions of a few at the top. But the effect on the rank and file and on the labor movement as a whole may well prove disastrous.

A Gold Mine.

Economists have for some time been wondering out loud whether gold will ever again have its historic importance in economic life. Totalitarian governments have demonstrated that they can get along without it. Our own Nation, on the other hand, is plagued by a superfluity of the yellow metal.

For the individual, however, the lure of gold remains. The gold rush of '48, the mass migration to the Yukon somewhat over a generation ago, the mad rush to the Rand in the days of Cecil Rhodes and Barney Barnato—these would be duplicated overnight were another gold strike announced.

Indeed, this is precisely what is now happening in Canada, where a new untapped source of the yellow metal has been discovered at Yellowknife, in the Great Slave Lake area, nearly 1,000 miles north of Edmonton. Prospectors and their camp followers are pouring into the district by the hundreds, each convinced that an easily acquired fortune is within his grasp.

Nor would it be easy to convince them that the odds against such a happy outcome of their venture are overwhelming. Few participants have emerged from any of the gold rushes of modern times any richer than they went in. At Yellowknife is being repeated the old story of kiting prices and an inflated cost of living. Those selling goods and services to the miners are likely to prove the principal beneficiaries of the find.

But neither history nor logic, neither exploitation nor hardships, neither the example of the gold-poor totalitarian states nor the troubles of the gold-rich United States, are likely to deter the prospector. To own a gold mine continues in the popular imagination to be the height of affluence. Despite its restricted functions gold continues to be the most glamorous of metals.

Unjustified Deductions.

So much justified criticism has been heaped upon the Roosevelt Administration for using relief funds for political purposes that there is a temptation to exaggerate the influence of political factors in the allocation of Federal money. But in an analysis of the distribution of Federal loans and grants among the several States, H. R. Baukhage and T. R. Goldsmith, writing for the Annalist, have very convincingly refuted charges that per capita expenditures of Federal funds have been deliberately poured into States which hold the political balance of power. The article in Life in which these charges were made also alleged that outlays were lowest in the Southern States which are safely Democratic.

On the face of the returns the assertions regarding the Western States appear damning. Nevada, for instance, leads all other States in the size of per capita outlays of Federal loans and grants, while other Western States are runners-up for first place. On the other hand, the Southern States with few exceptions belong in the group receiving comparatively small per capita grants.

The accuracy of the statistical comparisons is not disputed, but the interpretations derived from them are unquestionably subject to challenge. The writers of the Annalist article, for instance, note that a large amount of relief money was spent in Nevada on CCC enrollees from other States, whose checks were cashed and spent in other parts of the country. Public roads also absorbed large sums, but these funds were allocated according to a Congressional formula with which the President had nothing to do. The largest single outlay, moreover—$24,000,000 for Boulder Dam—is a national project which cannot reasonably be assigned to any single State.

Messrs. Baukhage and Goldsmith further point out that the eight Western States receiving the most Federal money per capita cast only 3¼ per cent of the more than 27,000,000 votes received by President Roosevelt in 1936. It would certainly have been foolish to have lavished vast sums on these Commonwealths, therefore, for purely political purposes.

It is also noticeable that several States—Connecticut, Delaware, Rhode Island and New Hampshire—were included in the group receiving the lowest per capita allocations. They are certainly not safely Democratic strongholds in which Federal funds are not needed to capture votes. In fact, a fair appraisal of the allocation of funds indicates that very little attention has been paid to the purely political consequences of the methods of distribution of Federal funds. Messrs. Baukhage and Goldsmith therefore concluded that, although the "figures do not definitely prove that these expenditures have been allotted on the best basis that might be devised, we fail to discover evidence that political expediency has dictated the distribution of funds among the States."

Bendix Victrix.

It is hard to see that the victory of Miss Jacqueline Cochran in the Bendix Air Cup races proves a great deal beyond the now unquestionable fact that in any competition involving nerve and intelligence her sex suffers from no inherent disadvantage. Miss Cochran not only beat Frank Fuller, winner of last year's race, but the mark she set was close to the record he established at that time. With better luck in the matter of flying weather she might easily have surpassed it. It is quite possible that one of these days she will surpass it.

All this being so, the announcement that Miss Cochran now holds the transcontinental air record for women seems of little consequence. Indeed, since she and other women have proved themselves the peers of the best male racing pilots it appears even impertinent to place their achievements in a special category.

The fields in which modern women may not venture to challenge the greatest exploits of men steadily grow narrower. However, our misogynists and die-hard anti-feminists may take comfort in the thought that somewhere there must be an irreducible minimum of masculine superiority. Although women may reasonably hope some day to see one of their sex holding the heavyweight title or leading the American League sluggers, the fact remains that among the world's great cooks and the world's great dress designers male supremacy remains unshaken.

The Doctor And Money.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I speak my piece in regard to an article printed in your Sunday Post entitled "The Doctor's Trust, or M. D., a Specialist?" The author was a Mr. H. I. Phillips.

There are a few points on which this gentleman should be set straight. I agree that many specialists and doctors of today have developed a "money mania," but with most of them the fault is not theirs. It's the system through which each of them has to pass.

The old sawbones of yesteryear did as well as his few years of study permitted; most of his learning was on the patients, and he worked willingly for a small fee. Today the story is different. Medicine has progressed at an amazingly rapid rate. A youth to attain his degree must study far harder than ever before, cramming all the new knowledge and experience into his seven years before he gets the degree. A huge outlay of money for medical education has become a large sacrifice demanded of both the youth and his family, amounting to approximately $10,000 or $15,000.

When starting his study the youth was stirred with a deep ambition to serve humanity in a glorified way. After the long, tedious strain of grind and study, with time for very few pleasures and with only the goal of becoming a good doctor to keep him going, he finally stands with his class and honestly and wholeheartedly repeats the Hippocratic oath. Then, after the M. D. is achieved, he must have the additional year of interneship in general medicine added to his experience.

This is not the simple picture painted by Mr. Phillips to become a specialist. It is not the easy matter of a small town doctor on the minute he gets off a train in a city becoming a specialist. It's not just "the routine of opening an office in a smart section, making hours short, wearing a prince-nez and having at least one nurse and secretary around." Mr. Phillips may be trying to be facetious, but it makes him appear ignorant of the facts. Shouldn't he be a little more cognizant of the demands of the certificate of the specialist? Shouldn't he see the tragedy behind all those years of draining on the specialist-to-be's funds and patience, of ever awaiting the day when he earns his own first patient and his own first money? Internes receive no pay. No wonder the interne becomes concerned over money; no wonder his perfect dream of service must fade somewhat when he faces the realities of the system.

Check the facts of the case; don't generalize too freely. Perhaps with a corrected system and with some financial provision for the young doctor, worries may be lessened and service may become rightly the whole concern of the M. D.

We speak from facts and experience.

A YOUNG INTERNING SPECIALIST AND HIS WIFE.

Destructive Dogs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent publication of a letter from Mrs. B. G. McIlwee anent the city dog nuisance, in relation to beautification of the parks, playgrounds and private lawns, is worthy of commendation. Having been associated with Mrs. McIlwee in this beautification program, and knowing the zeal with which she has prosecuted it in an effort to place our parks, schoolgrounds and other areas in a more presentable appearance, I wish to add a few words in behalf of the activity.

While I appreciate the fact that some dogs are the friends of man and having in mind the famous eulogy pronounced on the dog by the late Senator Vest, of Missouri, at the same time I feel that the presence in any city of so many dogs, as is the case in Washington, where in many cases the owners are not inclined to keep them in check, is not only a nuisance but a detriment to life and property.

The trouble with the present situation is that an owner of a dog, having paid his license fee for the animal, is immune from complaint by a citizen who feels that his person or property is injured by the activities of the animal. The same logic does not apply with respect to the ownership of other property for which a license or tax is paid by the owner, such as the automobile, whose owner is responsible for damage by it to persons or property.

Those interested in the beautification program feel that the owner of a dog should restrain the activities of the animal to his own premises instead of taking it out on a leash, or unleashed, to a neighbor's property, city parks or schoolgrounds, with their resultant depredations. This should not be considered an unreasonable request, and enforcement of such a regulation by the police should present no difficulty, the owner of the dog being warned on the first offense and his dog confiscated on the second, without right of reclaiming the animal.

I notice in Franklin Park a sign of the park officials forbidding dogs in certain sections of that park except on leash. While this is the only prohibition against dogs to come to my attention, I question the propriety of the park people allowing dogs, even on leash, to destroy plants and flowers in their parks.

The question of more strict regulation of dogs in relation to depredations on public and private property will be the subject of a hearing shortly before a committee of District officials, when proponents of methods to restrict their destructive work will lay before the officials much evidence in support of their contention that dogs should not be allowed to run practically at large, as at present, with their attendant trail of destruction.

ERNEST H. PULLMAN,
Secretary, Committee on Beautification of Schoolgrounds.
Washington, Aug. 30.

A New Englander.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A piece, entitled "North to South," by Westbrook Pegler, in your paper for August 29, gives the impression that prohibition mistakenly got into the Constitution because the South wanted this erstwhile noble experiment, forgetting that the West actually sponsored it.

Mr. Pegler says "that old matter of State rights is up again," but feels that in prohibition days he should not have been denied a drink when these rights were merged with the sovereign's paramount right, viz., the people's. Well, with all the speakeasies in New York and other centers of Northern culture, did he have to raise a thirst?

I am a New Englander. Four years ago I migrated to Washington, thence to Virginia, gateway and entrance hall, respectively, of the South. It's fortunate that the South hasn't completely lost its heritage; today Norfolk is more of an English town than Boston, the latter being predominantly Irish and Italian. And, this may really surprise you, Mr. Pegler, there are some Southerners who feel they would be better off if Queen Victoria had gone to war against Abe Lincoln et al.

Conservatism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt is quoted as having said at his press conference on Friday, last:

If there is a good liberal running on the Republican ticket I would not have the slightest objection to his election.

It is to be assumed the President intended to say:

If the Democrats nominated a conservative and the Republicans nominated a liberal I would not have the slightest objection to the election of the Republican.

Webster defines "a conservative" as "one opposed to hasty changes in the political, religious or civil institutions of the country."

Is it possible that the President's definition of "a liberal" is: "One favoring hasty changes in the political, religious or civil institutions of the country?"

I dare say that the great majority of so-called conservatives have sufficient intelligence to realize that vast changes have occurred in economic and social matters which require new relations between the Government and the individual and desire that in the making of new and necessary adjustments the best of those values that have been brought out in the past—based solely upon experience, shall be conserved rather than absolutely discarded. They also believe it should be the considered judgment of all legislative bodies that any changes made would not bring about unnecessary confusion and would be for the general welfare of all concerned. LESTER DALE.

The Traffic Safety Crusade.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Washington newspapers, I note, are reporting the substantially reduced accident and fatality record for the month of August. This is most gratifying news, not only to the Advisory Committee on Traffic Safety but to every citizen of Washington. I want to take this opportunity to congratulate and commend the newspapers of Washington for the editorial policy and the reportorial skill that has kept this modern problem so ably before the Washington public.

I express the unanimous opinion of the committee when I say the credit for a very large share of the success achieved in August in reducing our traffic injuries and fatalities is due to The Washington Post and the other newspapers of this city. You have been pioneers and crusaders in this cause for many years, and it should encourage you as well as us to see some measure of success arising from a co-ordinated attack.

I ask your support at this time in one new phase of the campaign. One hundred and one thousand children will return to school Monday, September 19. This affords a psychological opportunity to stress again the requirement that all automobile drivers exercise greater caution and precaution in operating vehicles on the streets of Washington. I wish we could inculcate a spirit of courtesy and chivalry in the drivers of today. Such an attitude would go an immense distance in solving certain aspects of this problem. I wish we could impress parents, guardians, and teachers with the stark fact that city streets today are literally more dangerous than railroad tracks and that all of us, but in particular little children, move in the imminent presence of danger every time we step on them.

The Police Department of Washington is doing an intelligent and splendid job, and those in our District Government charged with traffic management and highway safety are bringing the best of modern ideas and devices to bear on the problem in Washington. But unless we can have a new conception of the realities of street dangers today on the part of both drivers and pedestrians, we shall continue to pay a fearful price in pain and death.

The most effective agency so far for reaching these great groups of our population is the daily newspaper. I want to thank you and ask for your continued leadership in this cause. ALBERT L. COX.
Chairman, Advisory Committee on Traffic Safety.

Horses And Hedges.

THE PROMINENT CITIZEN, Mr. Purton Dell, removed his glasses which he required for perusal of the morning paper, and gazed over his well-kept lawn. He observed regretfully that Thaddy had stopped short in his duty of trimming the Dell hedge, and had buried his head in a paper. Since Thaddy was not noted for literary tastes, Mr. Preston Dell decided to inquire into the phenomenon.

"Ar-umph," said he, twirling his silvery military mustache, and approaching the motionless Thaddy. "What is engaging your attention, may I ask?"

"'Tis me new copy of Turf and Horse,' sir."

"Haw! You are not thinking of wasting your money betting, I hope? Let me take a look at it."

Thaddy handed over the paper, with injured expression. Mr. Purton Dell perused with pleasure, admiring the slim lines of the latest 2-year-old sensation.

Mr. Purton Dell agreed, and added that it was a nice track.

"It is," said Thaddy. "In October there's not a prettier place in the land. Blue haze as thick as my pipe smoke, and the leaves yellow and gold. 'Tis a lovely sight!"

"Why, so I think myself," said Mr. Purton Dell, one eye glued to "Turf and Horse." "I see that you have an eye for the beautiful."

"I have, indeed, sir. Why, in the Old Country——"

"Yes, yes," said Mr. Purton Dell hastily. You've told me about that."

"I am telling you, sir," said Thaddy, rather severely, "about Laurel now. It hasn't been the same to me since my friend, Doubty, had to put his stable on the block. Those were the horses for a distance; stretch runners, all of them. Oh, the fine gray horses!"

"You might as well tell it," said Purton Dell, with a regretful eye on "Turf and Horse."

"'Twas a day when the leaves were falling and the air all golden. I had heard about a blue mare that was running, one of these horses I'm telling you about. Gray she was, of course, but deep, warm gray, none of your cold, dark grays. Arrah! She was the fine one! Twenty-to-one, she opened at."

"You played her?"

"I did. And it was the last dollar I had in the world. The horses were at the barrier. Down came the flag. A mile and a sixteenth, the distance was. They came, thundering past the stands, me hanging on the rail, and fairly breathin' in the dust. 'What you got?' says a man beside me. 'Bluestone,' says I. How he roared! 'Look at your Bluestone now!' he says.

"I did look—and a sad sight it was. She was running last as they went into the backstretch. There was only one thing to please me. She was running nice and easy; her boy was taking it easy, too. I could see the colors flash in the light. Old Doubty's colors. Silver and indigo. A pretty sight, the kind to put something in your throat."

"I know," admitted Purton Dell.

"She was coming nice and easy, but she can't do it, I says to myself. He's let her drop too far out. No horse could make up that ground. I started to turn away, for it went hard with me. And then I took one more look. She was coming, boys! How she was coming! Nice and steady—creeping up on the pack. The boy was riding her now! Old Doubty never fooled with a boy that wasn't good, and this boy knew his horse. They were swinging into the stretch. The jockey was fighting for the rail! Blocked! He couldn't make it! He was taking her overland. She could never make it!"

"Not using his whip! Hand-riding her all the way, and she giving everything she had in the world. Oh, those gray horses! Going like a mad horse! The boy wasn't even riding, just staying with her. Past the ruck of them, bunched so you couldn't tell which was which. Past the leaders, and still coming, just a few yards to go! And Bluestone was under the wire a length and a half in the lead, and drawing out. Why, she could have gone another mile. Never any other horses like them. Gray horses! Stretch-runners."

"A very game animal, I am sure," said Purton Dell. Now, if I should hear of one like her, I might be tempted to—er—place a small wager for the sport of the thing, you know."

"Not many of Doubty's horses left in these parts, sir. But I do hear they're to race a half-sister of Bluestone at Laurel."

"Very interesting! Now I will just look over this 'Turf and Horse' for awhile. You will not need it while you are cutting the hedge."

The German Paradise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I cannot claim divine inspiration, but I have been much moved by the news reports of a speech made by Dr. Robert Ley, head of the Nazi Labor Front, at the Stuttgart rally of foreign-resident Germans now revisiting the fatherland. Dr. Ley is quoted as saying: "If there is a paradise I feel sure that it cannot be more beautiful than National Socialist Germany."

A Paradise, says Dr. Ley,
Has Germany become.
In saying it he winks an eye,
The nasty, Nazi bum.

If Germany's a Paradise,
I'll say to Dr. Ley,
Then Purgatory must be nice,
And Heaven far from high.

In Dr. Ley's Utopia—
Admit it, Dr. Ley—
Each little Boche must answer "ja"
To every doctored lie.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

The Pegler Policy.

MY FOREIGN POLICY is a sharp reversal of the pathetic effort of this country and its people to buy the friendship and respect of others by pretending to be unaware of insults from abroad and treacherous imposition on the hospitality of our own house.

My foreign policy is "to hell with them!"

It is unimportant whether the Russians, Germans, Italians, French, British, Irish or Mexicans like us. The test should be "do we like them?" and they should now be allowed to take their turn at the patient and rather humbling work of ingratiation.

To be realistic, we have no friends. However painful the blow may be to the sentimental feelings of some Americans of German or Italian origin or stock, the German and Italian governments hate this country and show their ill will constantly. The French, at heart, like us no better, as they have shown in many demonstrations of feeling about La Dette, and the British gave us the name of Uncle Shylock by way of proving that their friendship for their lost province bore a price tag.

• • • •

SO IT IS a good idea to avoid crushes and to remember that the instant any apparent friendship between this country and any other is placed under pressure of conflict of interest it cracks.

It is undignified and it creates no respect for the Americans that we are constantly making allowances for the disturbed national state of mind of this or that foreign land in smiling away impositions on this country's patience and manners. If Italy, for example, is as highly cultured and civilized as she claims to be, why should the United States, that uncouth Nation of gangsters, constantly be called upon to excuse her gratuitous indecencies which affront civilization itself?

I know of no official campaign by this country, save during the war, and then only against the enemy nations, to insult any other people before the world or create disorder within their borders. We have sent no official or confidential agents to raise organized hell in Russia, Germany or Italy, but all three governments have boldly traduced us and interfered with our domestic peace by organizing Communist, Nazi and Fascist bands to conspire against the domestic health of a nation already distressed by its own ills.

• • • •

THE RECORD of American good works for other countries in distress is rich in gifts and deeds, but aside from the single gesture of the British admiral who stood off the Germans at Manila Bay and ran up the signal to Admiral Dewey, "these Germans have rotten sea manners," there has been no return favor. And it gets tiresome to be told over and over of Italy's great gifts to the United States, because the Italian immigrants who contributed so much to the material and esthetic life of this Nation were not sent by the Italian nation. They were fugitives from dreadful economic and social conditions in that beloved Italy, and the plain truth is that the steamship companies, from practical, mercenary motives, were more actively responsible for their crossing than any other agency.

The wide-open American immigration policy of the time made these people welcome when misery became unbearable amid the vaunted civilization and culture of the boot, but the steamship lines were competing for steerage business at $20 or $30 per head. They brought the fugitives in by the thousand, for profit.

Italy had no intention to do the United States a good turn, and if she had any thought at all in the matter it was to get rid of a lot of people whom her highly civilized and cultured aristocrats regarded as cattle. And it were strange if any Americans of Sicilian origin or stock felt any love for Italy, because to this very day, under Mussolini, as any observant traveler can testify, the Italians of the mainland pronounce the word "Siciliano" with a note of loathing, as a Mexican says "Gringo" or Americans, in other days, said "Greaser."

• • • •

THE UNITED STATES has put in 20 years trying to placate other peoples by gifts of money and help and by patient allowances, and the net result is they take us for the saps that we undoubtedly are.

Did any foreign country offer to dust this country off and rehabilitate the devastated South after the Civil War? Did any of them offer so much as a yard of spaghetti or an inch of liverwurst or even a kind word when our Ohio River slopped all over 10 States a couple of years ago?

So I propose a special flag for our foreign service to be flown above every embassy, ministry and consulate, with the motto, "Now You Chase Me."

Royal Visitation

Smile

When M. Sarraut, Minister for the Interior, was thanked at the Council of Ministers for the measures he had taken for the security of the King and Queen he said: "It was the Queen's smile that did everything."

—Sunday Chronicle, London.

Faux Pas

During the Royal visit to Paris the interior decorator had hung a charming portrait of Mme. du Barry, painted by Nattier, over King George's bed. A few days later it was taken away. The officials explained this by saying: "Just imagine the Queen coming in and seeing the portrait of the courtesan over the King's bed. That would have been a terrible faux pas!"

—Canard Enchaine, Paris.

Disturbing

It was particularly noticed at the banquet given for the British King and Queen at Versailles that, politically important as was the King's speech in its stressing of democratic ideals, Lord Halifax walked in to dinner after the Papal Nuncio, with the wife of the German Ambassador on his arm.

The Arabs Reunite

By Jacob Simon

Editor's note: The parts played by Pan-Arabism and Pan-Islamism in bloody warfare which already has caused thousands of casualties in the Holy Land is explained by a veteran United Press correspondent in the following dispatch:

JERUSALEM, Sept. 4.—Pan-Arabism, sponsored by Britain for 30 years to protect her interest in the Near East, has proved a boomerang in Palestine, a United Press survey showed tonight.

Fourteen Arabs were killed and two captured fighting British troops at Megiddo, the site of ancient Armageddon, today. The troops suffered no casualties. In five years such fighting has cost more than 2,400 human lives, 6,600 wounded and property damage estimated at $22,500,000.

British costs for policing Palestine, without which these figures would have been multiplied many times, amount to $35,000,000 for the period.

Palestine, ruled by Britain under a League of Nations mandate, is of relative minor importance in the Arab world, but only here has the Arab nationalist movement been able to become a serious political power. The Arabs, claiming the Holy Land, resent bitterly the thousands of Jewish settlers and have voiced their resentment with bombs and guns.

As far back as 1908 Britain, and France, began promoting a pan-Arab movement to oppose the power of the Turkish and imperial German empires in the middle-east. This movement resulted during the World War in the Arabic revolt against Turkey, fomented largley by the late Col. T. E. Lawrence, and led to establishment of the various post-war Arab states.

• • • •

AGAIN IN 1921, at the middle-Eastern conference which Britain held in Cairo and Jerusalem, a definite line of policy was resolved towards the Arabs. It was decided to promote Arab nationalism and the pan-Arab movement on the grounds of expediency; namely, that if such a movement were not created and supported in British interests, some other power might do this in its own interests.

The British permitted the growth of Pan-Arabism in the Holy Land to help keep the Zionists in check, but Pan-Arab leaders throughout Arab countries used this license for their own purpose of building up an anti-British, anti-imperialist movement actually by permission of the British.

The latest serious disturbances, which broke out this summer, have within three months resulted in 482 dead, 782 wounded and property loss of more than $625,000. This may be divided: British dead 34, wounded 62; Jewish dead 43, wounded 220; Arabian dead 400, wounded 500 (estimated). British government property destroyed is estimated at $250,000. Jewish property destroyed, $375,000—most of which eventually must be paid by British insurance companies.

Over the five-year period, the figures are: British dead 167, wounded 410; Jewish dead 282, wounded 1,200; Arabian dead 2,000, wounded 5,000 (Arab figures estimated). Over this period British property losses were $5,000,000; Jewish losses $15,000,000, and Arabian losses $500,000.

• • • •

THE BIG discrepancy in casualties is because, generally speaking, the Arabs have been the attackers and because, in contrast to the British military and the Jewish police, who have the most modern arms, the Arab desert raiders often are armed with ancient rifles not far advanced from the flint-lock era.

The movement active in Palestine, and which is receiving both moral and active support from other Arab countries in the middle-east, is much more Pan-Arabic than Pan-Islamic. Although the movements are often spoken of as one, there is a considerable difference between them.

All Moslems revere Mohammed, the prophet of Islam, and reverence the Koran, which is written in Arabic; but all Moslems are not Arabs. Conversely, all those who speak Arabic and belong to the Arab race are not Moslems. A strong believer in the Pan-Arab movement might not be a Moslem, although working with Moslems in the nationalist struggle.

• • • •

THE PAN-ISLAMIC movement began in the second half of the nineteenth century as a reaction against continued inroads by European powers in countries previously controlled by Moslems. The purposes of the movement included elimination of Western influence, enhancing of Moslem self-respect and establishment of an all-Moslem empire to be headed by the Khalif. He is the "substitute" on earth for Mohammed, whose position might be compared with that of the Pope, and the tie binding such an empire would be that of religion.

The Pan-Arab movement, fostered by Britain and France, set out to unite all Arabic-speaking peoples in western Asia and North Africa. During the World War this lever was used to procure the revolt of the Arabs against Turkish domination, which occurred despite the fact that the then Sultan of Turkey was the Islamic Khalif. Since then, the spirit of nationalism has continued to grow and it literally has gone beyond control of its sponsors.

As a result, the question of the Khalifate, which powerful position has been vacant for several years, has now become of importance to the British Empire, containing millions of Moslems.

• • • •

IN ADDITION to a possible pacific use of religious authority to curb Arab nationalism, the necessity for a pan-Islamic movement became marked when, in the late twenties, Russian Communists, through their Islamic minorities, began agitation among Moslems all over the world. Later, the rise of Italy as a colonial power in North Africa, vociferously interested in the welfare of the Moslem world, awakened further apprehension, particularly on the part of Britain and British protected Egypt.

At the moment the tendency is to speak of the youthful King Farouk of Egypt as the future khalif. It must be confessed, however, that for the past 15 years or so the pan-Islamic movement has been moribund and has only served as a club with which pan-Arab leaders have attempted to terrify the British, and with which they have certainly frightened the leaders of the Zionist movement, their enemies in Palestine. The Islamic religion as such is still gaining ground, but its cohesive force seems to be diminishing with the rise of nationalistic spirit in Islamic countries.

Auto Union Battle Nears Showdown

Detroit, Sept. 4 (AP).—The struggle between John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, for control of the second largest C. I. O. union is due for a showdown this week.

The U. A. W. executive board will meet here Wednesday to receive from Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, Lewis lieutenants, the C. I. O. leader's plan for restoring peace in the much-divided union.

Since the U. A. W. has been rent by factionalism the board generally has split 12 to 6 in favor of Martin. Lewis and his C. I. O. strategists have proposed a truce between Martin and his adherents and the faction led by four U. A. W. officers who were expelled this summer, calling for reinstatement of those executives until the biennial convention next August.

U. S. Agriculture Yearbook Issued

The Department of Agriculture's third yearbook, entitled "Soils and Men," will be issued today. The 1938 yearbook, which deals with misuse of soil, is dedicated to the memory of Curtis Fletcher Marbut, chief of the soil survey division of the department for many years.

"Soils and Men" discusses causes and remedies for soil misuse, pointing out that if present farm practices continue, 60 per cent of the country's crop land will be eroded. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace has written a foreword to the book, which is for sale by the superintendent of documents at $1.75 a copy.

freedom than they would ever have in the Third Reich, and more than is enjoyed by any other minorities in Europe. What has been offered them in the latest proposals of cantonization places them on exact equality with the position of the French and Italian minorities in Switzerland. Certainly, no one considers the citizens of Geneva and Lausanne as suffering from oppression! Czechoslovakia is insisting on nothing except her continued existence as a sovereign state and the maintenance of civil liberties and democratic institutions for all her nationalities alike, even if they do not want them.

• • • •

PEACE OR WAR is at this moment in the hands of one man. But the question is not whether Hitler wants war, whether his mind is bellicose for peace. The question is whether he is not grotesquely misappraising the international situation, and, second, whether he has not now reached a point from which he cannot retreat even if he wants to do so.

• • • •

ADOLF HITLER does not speak or read a single word of a foreign language, and up to his state visit to Mussolini, he was never outside Germany. But he has a definite world picture of his own. His picture includes a belief in the rottenness, weakness and indecision of the democracies, the impotence of Russia, the degeneration of France, the disinterestedness of England, and the total isolationism of the United States. The most disturbing piece of news in the last few weeks is the report that Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, heads the so-called war front. Mr. Ribbentrop is the man who gathers all the information which the diplomatic service provides, and it would forebode the worst if his views finaly determine Hitler's decision, because he is apparently convinced that no great power will interfere if there is an attack in or against Czechoslovakia.

As a matter of fact, Germany is facing, on this issue, the most overwhelming coalition of powers against her that the world has ever seen. France will fight to save Czech independence, because otherwise the last chapter of the history of France as a great power will be finished. Britain will fight because she is committed by treaty and vital self-interest to defend France. Russia will fight on both ideological and nationalist grounds. The Little Entente powers have just confirmed—in the meeting in Bled last month—their solidarity against Hungarian expansion, so that if Hungary should join Germany in an attack on Czechoslovakia she would be submerged by invading armies from three sides. Poland, while very anxious not to stick out her neck until the great powers act, could only, in a war, be on the same side as Britain. Poland has only the choice of being an ally of the Western powers, or a battleground, between Germany and Russia. As for Italy—the German General Staff cannot have forgotten 1914.

And the United States? Does Germany doubt that the resources of this country, moral and economic, will be at the disposal of the Western democracies if they are engaged in a titanic struggle? The principle of freedom of the seas, which between 1914 and 1916 almost involved us in war with Britain, has been abandoned, and a British blockade of Germany would become effective from the first outbreak of war! Both President Roosevelt and Cordell Hull have been outspoken enough so that even the people in Berlin must have some inkling of how things stand.

• • • •

NOW, THERE are people in Germany, responsible people, in the foreign office, in the arts, and in industry, who know all this. But whether their moderating counsels will prevail with Adolf Hitler is the question on which hangs the world's peace. But is Hitler still free in his decision? For five years the German nation has been organized and geared up to a tension which has reached the breaking point. For months the Sudeten Germans have been told that "The Day" has arrived. The authority of the regime suffered a severe setback in May, when Czechoslovakia mobilized. The economic strain has become almost unbearable. The pessimism of business is reflected in the recent collapse of the Berlin stock market. The craziness of the Nazi system is demonstrated by the construction mania which is tearing down and rebuilding huge areas of German cities, while the people hunger and contemplate a war. And the recent mobilization has at last brought home to the people the danger of the international situation. Every disinterested report from Germany during the last few weeks indicates a state of neurosis among the people.

The stage seems to be set for an explosion. For Hitler has lived for five years exclusively on success and prestige, and the world trembles to know whether he can retreat and still maintain himself and the Nazi state.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Airman's Compensations.

Oh, to fly an ocean—
Alone up in the sky! . . .
And get all that confetti
In nose and ear and eye!

To hop the broad Atlantic,
With courage rare and stout—
To stage (I think) a saga . . .
And get shoved all about!

To fly across to Europe,
With manner, oh, so gay! . . .
And have the flashlight madmen
Annoy me night and day!

To do a deed heroic,
And brighten it with fibs . . .
And have the world acclaim me
Through elbows in my ribs!

To zoom right through the heavens
And hop a sea or two . . .
And see great cities fighting
To knock me black and blue!
To fly off in the dawning
Upon an epic hop,
And have the people fete me,
And not know when to stop!

To make a goal quite distant,
Defying death the while . . .
And answer silly questions—
(And do it with a smile!)

To stare down black disaster
And scale the highest peaks . . .
And have to hear those speeches
For weeks and weeks and weeks!

To hop across to Paris,
To Omsk and then to Nome . . .
And have to stand those dinners
Arranged when I get home!

To take a leap to Moscow,
To Fairbanks—any place . . .
And never mind when someone
Is standing on my face!

To fly the wrong (or right) way,
To know the highest fame . . .
There isn't any difference—
The punishment's the same!

Sir:—I resigned my colonelcy in the U. S. Army at the close of hostilities in France, as my father did his colonelcy in the Confederate army at the end of the Civil War. I am a Democrat and my father was before me, and I vote the Democratic ticket as my father did before me. Oregon Scientists Report Chemical Vital as Vitamins

Milwaukee, Sept. 4 (AP).—Two Oregon State College scientists announced today the discovery of a new chemical which is as vital to life and growth as the vitamins and hormones.

In a report made in advance of the American Chemical Society's ninety-sixth annual meeting here, Dr. Roger J. Williams and Robert E. Eakin declared the chemical, which they called "biotic acid," is so powerful that less than one part per million parts of animal or plant tissue is sufficient to sustain and promote life.

The discovery may prove important in the prevention and treatment of disease, just as knowledge of the vitamins and hormones brought about the control of rickets, diabetes, pellagra and other "deficiency" diseases.

Conquest Of Pain.

YOU HAVE A HEADACHE? Try aspirin . . . Tooth must be pulled? Will you take laughing gas or a local anesthetic? . . . An operation? Well, you won't feel it at the moment, and they'll give you something to keep the pain down afterward . . . It seems almost incredible that such conversations have been possible for less than a century, that through all the countless decades of recorded and unrecorded time pain was accepted as normal, inevitable, even salutary . . . Rene Fulop-Miller, having undergone a personal experience of pain and of its conquest, set out to study and to dramatize the conquest of pain. "Triumph Over Pain" (Bobbs, $3.50), he calls his book.

• • • •

THERE WERE great names in Europe before the strange four-cornered American ether war began. There was Joseph Priestly, the free-thinking parson who discovered what we now call oxygen and nitrous oxide, and young Humphrey Davy, who, aged 17, dared to experiment with these gases, and, in 1795, discovered the properties which give nitrous oxide its common name of "laughing gas." He inhaled it, he laughed, and the famous doctor to whom he was apprenticed almost discharged him for his levity. Davy discovered that his "laughing gas" stopped a toothache, but he had no inkling of its future use in extractions. He tried to reduce fat by the use of gas; he taught his friend, the poet Coleridge, how exhilarating it might be; he "cured" asthma with it. Then he became frightened by the possible effects of his drug and quit experimenting. "Pneumatic chemistry" was his name for his new science.

It was Michael Faraday, Davy's upstart bottle washer, who in 1818 discovered that ether could put people to sleep, and so laid the basis for further discoveries. But again the doctors ignored the pointer, and pain continued. When, 15 years earlier, a German druggist, Friedrich Wilhelm Serturner, had isolated what he first called the "somniferous principle" of opium, naming it "morphine," after the Greek god of sleep, again the professors denounced his "amateurish nonsense," and refused to utilize his discovery. An English doctor, Henry Hill Hickman, after experimenting with mice, actually used laughing gas for painless operations as early as 1828, but both the London and the Paris academies refused to take him seriously, and he died unrecognized, aged 29, ignorant of the posthumous fame that would come to him.

• • • •

The great quartet of the ether war were all Americans.

Dr. Crawford W. Long, of Jefferson, Ga., in 1842 performed the first painless operation under ether, but did not bother to report it to his medical colleagues.

Horace Wells, a Hartford dentist, in 1844, watching a circus performance with laughing gas, observed that one of the inhalers, when cheered by the gas, scraped his shin badly but obviously felt no pain, and so was moved to experiment upon himself, and had one of his own teeth pulled under gas. Unfortunately, Horace Wells knew very little about his gas; when he attempted to demonstrate his discovery upon a Harvard student he did not give the boy enough, and he yelled with pain; when he tried to demonstrate again at Hartford he administered too much gas and his patient almost died.

• • • •

DR. WILLIAM T. G. MORTON, a Boston dentist, had been Wells' partner. He administered the gas for Wells at his first unsuccessful demonstration. He took Wells to see a famous Boston chemist, Dr. Charles Thomas Jackson, for further advice. Later, after endless experiments at his own home, on dogs and fishes, with various narcotics, he again consulted Jackson, and from him received the suggestion that sulphuric ether might work better than ethyl chloride, and that it must be pure. He used ether in a painless tooth extraction in 1846 and forthwith became an apostle of his method. With vast difficulty he persuaded the surgeons at the Massachusetts General Hospital to try it out. From his experiments stems the modern use of anesthetics, and, indeed, all the intricate modern surgery which, without anesthetics, was impossible.

Jackson, the chemist who had suggested ideas to Morton but never made use of them, was the fourth claimant to the title.

Morton patented his discovery. Jackson at first accepted a 10 per cent interest in the profits. But there were no profits. Morton was decently glad to have the Government use his methods with the Mexican War wounded, and the patents lapsed.

Campaign Funds

By Ernest K. Lindley

Legality Depends Upon Interpretation.

SENATOR SHEPPARD contends that the law prohibits voluntary contributions by Federal officers and employes to the campaign funds of candidates for the Senate and House. Secretary Morgenthau contends that it does not.

Their difference of opinion is over the meaning of Section 118 of the Criminal Code, as amended, which reads:

"It is unlawful for any Senator or Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, Congress, or any candidate for, or individual elected as, Senator, Representative, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner, or any officer or employe of the United States, or any person receiving any salary or compensation for services from money derived from the Treasury of the United States, to directly or indirectly solicit, receive, or be in any manner concerned in soliciting or receiving, any assessment, subscription, or contribution for any political purpose whatever, from any other such officer, employe, or person."

• • • •

THIS SECTION of the Criminal Code was derived from Section 11 of the Act of January 16, 1883—during the Arthur Administration. Except for unimportant changes in phraseology the two sections are the same.

At first reading, both might be interpreted as prohibiting every Federal officer and employer from making a voluntary contribution to any candidate for the Senate or House. However, that section of the Act of 1883 has twice been submitted to an Attorney General for a formal opinion.

In 1896, Attorney General Judson Harmon, under President Cleveland, stated:

"It is well settled that the intention of this act was not to forbid voluntary contributions for political purposes by persons in the employ of the Government, but to protect such persons from solicitation or coercion with respect to such contributions. Knowing the difficulty of detecting the actual operation of means and influences whose employment had become a public evil, Congress absolutely prohibited the solicitation or receipt of political contributions by all persons in the Government service in any place or in any way, and forbade such solicitation or receipt by any person in any room or building occupied in the discharge of official duties. All who are in the Government service are thus protected against the possibility of actual coercion and from that of the coercion implied in the relation of the person soliciting or receiving to the Government or implied in solicitation or receipt in a public office; but Congress did not attempt to prohibit solicitation by or payment to persons not in the Government service otherwise than in Government offices."

ATTORNEY GENERAL Harmon's opinion was reiterated with approval in 1902 by Attorney General Philander C. Knox, under President Theodore Roosevelt.

The rule of the Civil Service Commission prohibits persons in the executive civil service from using their "official authority or influence for the purpose of interfering with an election or affecting the results thereof." And it prohibits persons in the competitive classified service from taking an "active part in political management or in political campaigns." It does not prohibit voluntary contributions.

Secretary Morgenthau, a strong advocate of the merit system and all it implies, issued stringent regulations in August, 1934, concerning political activities by and among officials and employes of the Treasury.

Five weeks later, he issued a clarifying supplement which stated, among other things, that the regulations did not "prevent any such employe from voluntarily contributing to the campaign funds of the party of his choice, if such contribution is made freely and without coercion or improper solicitation, and is not made to a person in the service of the United States."

• • • •

MR. MORGENTHAU'S regulation seems to be in accord with a construction of the law which has been accepted over a long period of years.

Harry L. Hopkins likewise has followed this construction in informing WPA workers that they may make campaign contributions if they choose to do so, although there are good reasons for discouraging them from using their meager funds for this purpose and especially for condemning a plan to raise a special campaign fund among them.

In practice, the problem is to relieve officials and employes—especially those who hold 'non-political" jobs—from the pressure to make campaign contributions. Secretary Morgenthau seems to have gone as far as the present law justifies.

Reflection

This column supposes that most of its clients are at beaches or mountains, disporting themselves today. That is proper, and we trust the day will be pleasantly long. For we have been too long out of the bushes to suppose you are at home, closed in, for a deep soul-searching of the way labor is drifting.

We doubt that many of you (we are presuming that Government people are labor-minded; their flowering unions would indicate it) will listen long, if at all, to the burning speeches. (The mountains and the seashore are too engaging for that). Labor Day has become too much a holiday for speeches, anyway. The American custom of mixing speeches with fun seems, if anything, incongruous.

But a little off-side thinking might, profitably, be sandwiched between all the fun. First off might be considered the gains Federal employes have won through organized effort. To note even the major ones would require considerable space. And, from that point, may be considered what gains are yet to be won, most notably the five-day week, a reclassification, a court of appeals that would be honest and free of reprisal opportunities to your boss, and, all too importantly, an extension of the merit system even beyond the scope envisaged by the recent Executive intervention.

From that train of thought leads the question how can these further gains be had? No one is innocent enough to think that Congress, out of a sudden burst of enthusiasm to make Uncle Sam the model employer, will give these boons without a prodding, perhaps without a struggle on its part. The answer, then, becomes easy.

Gains in the future, as in the past, will come only through organization. And there are several organizations. What gains proceed from the forthcoming Congress will be at the behest of one or another of these organizations. And the more the organizations combine their action, the quicker the gains will appear.

The more solid the front offered the Congress, the more impressed the Congress will be. Congress, being composed of human elements, is more apt to heed a united will than one which is split and seemingly undecided about what is wanted. United action is always desirable to split action. And all of this argument sounds so elemental, almost so innocent, that the writing of it becomes a pain.

But elemental as it may be, there are many persons, perfectly sound-minded in every other respect, who apparently can't get so simple a thing in their heads. And out of all the roving and vituperation and split-action, the Government employe emerges—the sufferer.

This may be thought over between the swims, the hikes and the joy rides of this fair Labor Day. And if any determination comes from it, it might be in the way of a plea to the responsible people in all the Federal employe unions to forget their grudges when united action is imperative for the good of all the employes whom the unions were organized to serve.

The fact that there are several unions is unimportant. Each can serve its obligation to its membership and fulfill its reason of being thereby. But when contention among the several takes such public form as to give an impression that employe aims and hopes are at an insupportable variance, it is easy to see how little attention the Congress, the administrative heads or anybody else will pay to any of it.

Everyone knows what proposals for employes are sound, and which are unsound. And it becomes increasingly difficult to understand, when a sound proposal is advanced from any source, why all the unions don't pounce upon it with the solid front it deserves and push it to conclusion. If that were always done, the gains for employes would be rolled up tremendously. And it is so obvious.

Col. and Mrs. Sultan Honored at Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Tompkins Give Farewell Party for Retiring District Commissioner and Wife, Leaving for Fort Logan, Colo.

By Elizabeth Henney.

Winding up the "Whirlwind Finale" of their tour of duty in Washington, the retiring District Commissioner, Col. Dan I. Sultan, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., and Mrs. Sultan were guests of honor at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Tompkins at their home, "Battery Terrill," on the edge of Rock Creek Park.

Others at the affair were Brig. Gen. Max C. Tyler, Col. and Mrs. Thomas E. Robins, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., Col. and Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright, Col. and Mrs. Gordon Russell Young, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Raymond A. Wheeler and Col. and Mrs. Robert L. Eichelberger.

Still others included Lieut. Col. and Mrs. John Milliken, B. W. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. James Sherier, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dent, Mr. and Mrs. Francis F. Gillen, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Murphy, Capt. and Mrs. Patrick H. Tansey and Capt. and Mrs. Noel S. Bishop, jr.

It was a real farewell for the Sultans because this morning they leave Washington for Fort Logan, Colo. The family will separate to proceed by different routes to the same destination. Col. Sultan and one daughter, Miss Sheila Sultan, will motor to New York. Mrs. Sultan will leave Washington tomorrow and go by train to New York, from where they will sail for Colorado, by way of San Francisco, on September 9, aboard the U. S. Army transport U. S. Grant. Miss Linda Sultan, the other daughter, left Washington yesterday to go West by train, in order to arrive in time to enter the University of Colorado at Denver for the fall semester.

The Sultans have been house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Tompkins since they closed their Washington home. "Battery Terrill," an intensely interesting house for any one to visit, is especially so for military folk, for it is actually a battery, an old Civil War fort. It was one of the series of defenses built as inner circle or last resort for the protection of the City of Washington.

Home Is on Site of Fort

When Mr. and Mrs. Tompkins purchased the property, they cut a road through the earthwork fortress and in the center built a beautiful Georgian home. Around the inside of the fort they have planted and pruned and terraced until they have developed the property into one of the garden spots of Washington.

Stop-over guests for the Labor Day week-end were Lieut. and Mrs. William F. Ryan, who visited Capt. and Mrs. Noel S. Bishop at their home on Twenty-ninth street. Lieut. Ryan has been on duty at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, as the aide to Brig. Gen. Duncan K. Major, jr. He and Mrs. Ryan returned to the mainland on the transport Republic, arriving in New York on August 18, and have been on leave visiting Mrs. Ryan's sister and brother-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. N. A. Costello, at West Point. After Labor Day, they will leave for Fort Sill, Okla., Lieut. Ryan's new station.

Mrs. Ryan is the former Marjorie Simonds, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. George S. Simonds. She attended Western High University here. Mrs. Costello was formerly Miss Frances Simonds.

Gen. Simonds, who was Commandant of the Army War College in Washington and later commandant of the Ninth Corps area, retired from active service last March. He and Mrs. Simonds now make their home in San Francisco.

On Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Bishop (the former Louise Hickman, daughter of Col. and Mrs. E. A. Hickman) had a host of Mrs. Ryan's friends and former schoolmates in for tea. Mrs. Ryan was one of Mrs. Bishop's bridesmaids.

Among other new arrivals in town are Col. and Mrs. Robert M. Blanchard and their two attractive young daughters, Miss Josephine Blanchard and Miss Mary Blanchard. They also have come from Hawaii, where Col. Blanchard, recently retired, was on duty at Fort Shafter. They have come to Washington and taken an apartment at the Westmoreland until November. They are still stirring about, trying to decide on a permanent home, but have a definite leaning toward Washington.

Another attractive couple on their way to Washington and due to arrive most any moment are Capt. and Mrs. John Rutherford Noyes. Capt. Noyes, who has been on duty with the National Guard at Las Cruces, N. Mex., has been assigned as a student at the Army Industrial College in Washington.

Mrs. Noyes, a most interesting personality, started out to be a doctor, and after several years of work and a degree in that field she suddenly discovered she was an artist. Her Bambino Plaques of heads of children adorn the walls of many Army quarters, and she has often had more orders for them than she could fill. She and Capt. Noyes will be house guests of Capt. and Mrs. Philip E. Garges at Fort Belvoir, Va., until they have located a home in Washington.

Horners to Live In Guilford, Va.

Horner, of Washington, were married on Saturday, August 20, at the Memorial Chapel at Walter Reed Hospital. Chaplain Alfred C. Oliver, jr., officiated at the 5 o'clock ceremony.

Hjalmar Erickson, jr., brother of the bride, gave his sister in marriage. She was gowned in white lace, fashioned on princess lines with a long train, and carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. F. Ross Geller, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore white silk net, made on flowing lines. Her coronet hat and nose veil were of the same material. She carried sweetheart roses and delphinium.

Miss Marguerite Walker and Mrs. James M. Kinsler were the other two attendants, and wore white embroidered organdy trimmed in delphinium blue. They also carried sweetheart roses and delphinium.

Fred B. Rhodes, jr., of Baltimore, Md., was best man and the ushers were Arthur D. Horner, brother of the bridegroom, and James De Pue, both of Washington.

Married in Military Ceremony

Underwood & Underwood.

Terraec Dance In Chevy Chase

Mr. and Mrs. Mystrom Are Among Guests at Club Function.

With the Chevy Chase Club far from deserted on Saturday evening in spite of the holiday week-end, one of the largest crowds of the season turned out for the dance on the terrace.

One of the most attractive couples there was Mr. and Mrs. Lennert Nystrom, of Sweden, who are visiting Commander Hamilton V. Bryan for a week. The Nystroms came over here with the Crown Prince and his party, but remained to tour America after the royal party had left. Mr. Nystrom is an aviation expert and has been studying aeronautical radio here. They will sail back to Sweden early in October from New York.

In the group with Commander Bryan and the Nystroms were Mrs. Jerauld Wright, Commander and Mrs. John Creighton, Commander John Magruder, Mrs. John Hancock, Commander Jerauld Wiltse, and Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., who wore a pink frock of lace and net with one of the new up-swept coiffurs, which was very becoming. Miss Francesca McKenney was another dancer at Chevy Chase whose hair is already done in the new style.

Miss Nancy Brereton was the most popular young lady with the stag line. She wore a long white chiffon gown with a full graceful skirt and her inevitable corsage of orchids.

Mrs. John Wilson was seen whirling about the floor, and others there were Count Roberti (the Countess is at Newport with her father, Ogden Hammond), Frederick Nichols, Miss Alice Dodge, Mannix Walker and many others.

The Lambeth Walk was played later in the evening, but not much enthusiasm was shown for this new dance recently imported from England.

Miss Evelyn Iverson, Clinton D. Vernon Marry in Bethesda

Now on their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton D. Vernon will make their home in Washington. The wedding took place on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Johnson in Bethesda.

The bride is the former Miss Evelyn Iverson, daughter of Judge G. A. Iverson, special assistant to the Attorney General, and Mrs. Iverson, who make their home at the Hotel Roosevelt.

Miss Rachel Cooley, the maid of honor, was gowned in taffeta of an orchid shade and wore a corsage of purple orchids.

Weston Vernon, jr., was best man for his brother.

The bridegroom, son of Weston Vernon, of Logan, Utah, formerly was Assistant United States Attorney and is now in private practice of law. He received his A. B. and LL. B. degrees from George Washington University and was elected to the Order of the Coif, national honorary legal fraternity. His social fraternity is Pi Kappa Alpha.

The bride is an instructor in the department of speech at the University of Maryland. She was graduated from George Washington University and obtained her M. A. degree from Columbia University. At George Washington University she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma and was selected as the most outstanding girl in activities in her class.

Judge Iverson was formerly judge of the State District Court in Salt Lake City, Utah. He and Mrs. Iverson have lived in Washington for the past 11 years.

Her shoulder-length tulle veil was draped from a coronet of the tulle, and instead of the usual bride's bouquet she carried a large white muff trimmed with Easter lilies, gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor, Mrs. James G. Bowen, was in turquoise chiffon. Her large hat was of Burgundy velvet and Johanna Hill roses; lilies trimmed her muff.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl, 17, Plans Marriage With Young Man Who Has Led 'Very Fast Life;' She Seeks Reassurance.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 17 years old and have been going with boys since I was 14. About a year ago I met a boy who is seven years my senior, and I have gone out with him a good deal since, although not steadily, as mother wouldn't like it. We are thinking seriously of marrying and I have met his family and have had dinner at his home on an average of once a week. They are really grand people and seem to like me as much as I like them. He has given me a watch and I am wearing his ring . . .

• • • •

When my mother learned we were serious, she said she wouldn't stand in my way if I still wanted to marry him after I finish high school (I still have a half year to go) but that she doesn't think he is good enough for me. She feels that only professional people, such as doctors and lawyers, are worthwhile and wants me to go with boys who are interested in following a profession. There are a few other fellows I do go out with, but only because they have been very persistent and because mother would have been really angry if I had refused.

• • • •

This boy has led what might be termed "a very fast life." I realize this, but before we marry he is going to tell me everything he has done that is wrong and let me decide whether I want him or not. In little ways he shows that he thinks I am far above him, but we're just plain people and every man is entitled to nine mistakes, isn't he? I know I'm young to be thinking of marriage, but I'm not kidding myself; I know marriage is not a bed of roses . . .

• • • •

Why Parents Go Berserk.

Lately things have been pretty bad at home and we have no telephone. So several times when I was expecting this boy to come, he had to attend to something for his folks and didn't show up. I knew his absence couldn't be helped, as there was no way for him to get in touch with me, but mother was very angry and has been telling me all sorts of things she believes he was doing instead of seeing me. But I trust him and I hope I am not too much of a fool. If he really loves me, as he says he does, don't you think he'll be true?

TRUSTING.

DEAR TRUSTING: You think of yourself as a grown-up young lady savoring life. But in my opinion, your romance with this "very fast" young man is tantamount to a 5-year-old's playing with matches. You are running the risk of some badly burned fingers and a lasting dread of the fire, if not even greater psychic and social injury. Unfortunately for you, the day has passed when your mother might forcibly snatch you from danger, and administer a sound spanking as a warning and disciplinary measure. It would appear that she is exercising commendable tact and almost superhuman patience and is eventually betrayed by his own ation that she must see (that any intelligent adult onlooker must see) as being at once deplorable and potentially tragic in the extreme.

• • • •

It is adolescents of your type—ignorant, over-eager, willful and pathetically (because unwarrantedly) self-assured—who cause essentially reasonable minded parents to regret the day that they, and their offspring, were born. By your pig-headed determination to get yourself in hot water and draw them in along with you, you make it virtually impossible for them to deal with you in a manner that is at once fair and protective. By your general willful stupidity of conduct, by your greedy tendency to run an inch of freedom into a mile of license, you damn the whole younger generation to which you belong and which you represent—and cause parents to wonder, with some justification, whether you shouldn't be incarcerated until you have developed some powers of logical self-government.

• • • •

Of course you are not old enough to be thinking seriously of marriage. And for all your glib mouthing of the phrase that "marriage is not a bed of roses," you haven't the faintest idea whether it is or it isn't. You haven't the veriest notion what it—or anything else much—is all about. Believe me, if you did, you wouldn't be thinking of marrying any man for at least five years yet, and certainly not a youth who had "led a very fast life," and who was willing to postpone his confession of past mistakes to the eleventh, or zero hour.

• • • •

I venture to predict that if you marry this young man when just out of high school you will be supplicating advice from this or another source five years hence (if not before) on how to get yourself out of the predicament of being a harassed, overburdened young mother and neglected wife who is starving for contemporary-age pleasures, modest creature comforts and all such emoluments as accrue to the girl who marries wisely and well and in all good time.

• • • •

It may interest you to know that surveys of marital relationships indicate that the girl who marries before the age of 19 a man who is several years her senior almost inevitably comes to grief. I suppose, for one thing, that the man in his twenties who would consider an immature adolescent; for his wife is a man of considerable immaturity himself; perhaps a person of permanently arrested psychological or emotional development. For another thing, a girl your age just simply hasn't grown up yet. She is still more child than woman, so far as her physical, emotional and mental processes are concerned. She hasn't the physical stamina, the emotional stability or the mental poise and grasp of life to meet the demands of marriage and adult responsibilities in an adequate manner. You are no more qualified for haphazard marriage with a harum-scarum man, at this age, than a 12-year-old boy is qualified to be a lone-handed piano mover. You would be crushing your potentialities as he would be straining his back, in attempting such a task.

• • • •

However, I believe (and, indeed, for your sake, I hope and trust) that this romance is already on the wane. I am inclined to agree with your mother that there is little real excuse for his latter-day failure to keep appointments with you. I think it likely he is reverting to type and beginning to drift back to a faster-and-looser brand of companionship than you represent. He probably still cares for you after his fashion, as much as ever, but a man who has early acquired a taste for fast company seldom reforms for long; and his love for a given woman, no matter how great, is eventually betrayed by his own essential weakness of character. In other words, he hasn't the strength to be true to her, even if he would—which ought to supply the answer to your concluding question.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Nursery Walls Made Attractive By Crepe Paper

Circus-Parade Design Used for the Border at Baseboard.

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WHO COULDN'T have a story book nursery for his little majesty with a royal budget to tap? But what about all the babies who are every bit as nice as princes and princesses . . . but whose exchequers are far from regal?

"Well," writes Gertrude L., "I've fixed up the cutest nursery in town—and I've spent next to nothing. I got one of those new crepe paper patterns printed with a jolly circus parade design—I got enough to run all around the baby's room and pasted it on the wall like a wall-paper border running horizontally just above the baseboard.

"I did some experimenting with paste before I started and figured out the best way by the trial and error method. I'll pass on my tips to save somebody else from getting paste in her hair!"

"You use regular prepared wall-paper paste—it doesn't lump like home-made paste and just costs around 15 cents a pound, so it's worth the gamble. It can be used with hot or cold water. But here's the trick—put the paste on the wall instead of on the paper! The reason for this is that this paper is thin and is so apt to tear when you pick up the wet sheets, whereas you can handle it beautifully if you put the paste on the wall. If you still find it difficult, cut the strips in smaller panels so you won't have such big pieces to hold. The horizontal seams won't show enough to hurt.

"My little boy is just carried away with his room. The rest of the walls are white and the furniture (all old) is painted white with red trim. The floor is varnished and bare and the chairs are slip covered in plain red. For a bedspread, I've made a quilt with appliqued designs of circus animals.

"Everybody thinks it's a darling room, and so do I—even if it is bragging to say so."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

What Do Folk Mean by Term, 'Nervousness?'

THE TERM "nervousness" is used so frequently to explain some symptom that it has become commonplace, yet it is quite doubtful if many persons could give a clear-cut definition of the term or possess more than the slightest fundamental knowledge of its cause.

To most laymen nervousness means some disease of the nerves, in the sense that the nerves of nervous people differ in some way from those of a placid person. It is doubtful if many have ever thought to inquire in just what manner this difference could be demonstrated.

As a matter of fact, the medical profession is totally unable to determine the slightest difference between the nerves of a nervous person and a placid one.

When the physician says, "Your nerves are upset" or "You are nervous," or "You are on the verge of a nervous breakdown," he does not mean at all that your nerves would show the slightest variation from the normal if examined under the microscope. The term is a misnomer and does not have any direct bearing on nerves at all.

It means that through some cause, which it is the physician's duty to discover if possible, the patient presents agitation or anxiety and through this develops symptoms in various parts of the body. It simply means an abnormal "state of mind" or an overstimulation or activity of the emotional centers, and has nothing whatever to do with organic disease. It is quite the common thing to observe, however, an actual disturbance in the physiology or organs induced entirely through nervous influences, and these may be so profound as to completely incapacitate the patient. Some of the most serious prostrating illnesses have their entire inception in an abnormal emotional state, and tax the patience and ingenuity of the physician.

Almost every adult has experienced a sudden loss of appetite or inability to eat a meal after a severe fright or shock. Has it ever occured to you to ask the reason? You know, in a general way, that it is some way connected with the nerves and that you were so "upset" that you simply could not eat, that your appetite was completely gone. In fact, if you had tried to eat, against your better judgment, the stomach would have disgorged it immediately.

Now multiply this well known experience by 300, stretching the imagination over a period of three months, and try to conceive of a chronic state of fear or shock or anxiety with loss of appetite during this entire time, with occasionally a slight let-up in the symptoms, just sufficient to permit the taking of enough food to prevent absolute starvation, and you have a mental picture of a very common disorder. There is no question but that these things occur in just the manner described, and the only explanation is some profound disturbance of the emotional centers. The brain and nerves of this sort of person may be exactly like those of a normal healthy person in appearance and reaction to all sorts of tests.

Many Hats in Historic Exhibit Bear Earmarks of Today's Style

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

WHATEVER may be said about women's hats today, one thing is certain—for the last 200 years women have expressed a sense of humor in their headgear. This has been evidenced in a parade of period hats that a downtown store recently has been featuring in its windows.

The collectiotn, containing such historical hats as one worn by the first woman school teacher in the United States, one of Lillian Russell's and one of the mother of Aaron Burr, was assembled through years of research in Eastern, Southern and New England States.

Paradoxes Appear.

Although fashions are supposed to run in 10 or 20 year cycles, unbelievable paradoxes of style appear in the collection. For instance doll hats, which Schaiparelli initiated this season, cropped up in the 1800's, the 1840's and again during the Civil War. Even back in the 1700's the minature bonnet—Schaiparelli's original inspiration—was an established target for the blades of Jane Eyre's day.

About 60 chapeaux of varying periods are displayed in the collection, also several gowns of ancient design. These latter, corsetted, boned and hoop-skirted, are prophetic of many of today's styles.

Many of the hats are of such excellent workmanship and material that they might easily be worn today without fear of any more ridicule than the average smart hat elicits now. All of the displayed headgear is related to romantic or historic backgrounds and some of the hats are surrounded by story book fantasy. The first woman school teacher in America, Miss Tabitha Plasket, wore one of these hats early in 1700 when a pretty girl had to be a real pioneer to teach school in the frontier wilderness. Hers was probably the first imported silk hat in this country and not unlike the pokes worn this season and last by modern style pioneers.

Some of the other varieties similar to today's models are tiny pillboxes of ruffled black chiffon net, also mammoth Gibson Girls and 1900 flatterers. Most of these are of natural straw braid trimmed with ostrich circles, plumes and tassels, or more elaborately done in hatter's plush wilting under their own aigrettes. Saucy lace and beribboned toques, and satin banded mannish hats contrast with demure baby bonnets, all fluff, ruching and bows tied under the chin.

Wearer Was Slain.

Window audiences found one 1805 cartwheel remarkably similar to hats worn by the onlookers, as it was of natural rough straw, banded with black velvet and gold grapes. Lillian Russell, the lovely lady of the hourglass curves, is represented by an ostrich swirling picture hat of velvet and waving ostrich.

The turban worn by the mother of Aaron Burr is an unpretentious ribbon affair. The hat begetting the most sympathy from the onlookers is a naive off-the-face bonnet that had been worn by a girl who had been relentlessly pursued by two lovers. The jilted suitor on the girl's betrothal day shot and killed her. At the time she was wearing the little hat that now is droopingly housed with other dramatic headgear of the ages.

Jackets Surpass Dresses in Paris Fashion Decrees

Paris (U.P.).—Jackets are assuming such an importance of their own that they are no longer made to match dresses— dresses are made to match the jackets.

The short jacket or cape is frequently the most distinguished item in an evening ensemble. If it is chosen wisely, the same jacket can be worn with a multitude of both evening and afternoon dresses. Such a jacket is the heavy black crepe, one which Schiaparelli embroiders in heavy gold thread leaf design.

Mrs. Reginald Fellowes, Mrs. Alastair Mackintosh, Mrs. Ronald Balcom and Mme. Solvay all wear it. A dinner gown of black crepe, severely cut and untrimmed, provides the best background for it.

Covers Keep Food Clean.

Oiled silk covers, pouches and other food containers are a practical new contribution to the art of easy housekeeping. The containers are fitted with zippers to keep their contents fresh while the covers have elastic edges that fit snuggly over the rims of bowls, protecting them from dust and ice box odors. A daily dipping in thick luke-warm soapsuds followed by rinsing will keep these handy gargets sweet-smelling and clean.

And then he'll brighten your kitchen and make dish-drying more interesting. Make some for the fair. He'll go like hot cakes especially if you use gay colors for all the accessories. The pup would be best in black or brown. Pattern 6142 contains a transfer pattern of 6 motifs averaging 5¼x6¾ inches; materials needed; illustrations of stitches; color schemes.

Persian Trend Taking A Visible Shape Today

Paris (U.P.).—Persian tunics, with their characteristic slashes, are an interesting forecast for winter, while twisted Oriental headgear is a reality already. Twisted turbans of all types—some with pointed tops, others abruptly flattened as they reach their maximum height—promise to steal the glory away from more skyscraping hat shapes which make taxi-riding a task.

To climax the Persian trend, Lucien Lelong wound up his collection with the traditional wedding dress; a white crepe which this time almost spoke Persian from its draped train to its twisted turban head covering.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Misuse Rather Than Too Much Use of Eyes Is Damaging to Eyesight.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE INCREASED amount of close work required of the average business man or woman need not impair the vision. It is not use of the eyes but misuse of them that causes defective sight, according to a doctor who is credited with doing more than any other man in America toward the prevention of impaired vision.

I would like to tell you something about this doctor. He is over 80 years old and his own eyesight is so perfect that he does not need glasses. And on one of the hottest days of the year he deferred a trip to the country to give this interview, and then asked that his name not be used. Isn't that proof enough that he has your interests at heart?

When I asked him to tell me the common mistakes that injure the eyesight, he said: "You not only want to know what those mistakes are but why—the business man wants to know why they are mistakes." So here's the whole story.

Never Read When Tired.

"Don't read when you are tired, for your eyes are tired, too. You should not read on a train or a moving object, since the oscillation makes it necessary to continually refocus the eyes, and this is extremely fatiguing to them. If you already are tired, it is unwise to subject your eyes to this further strain.

Glare should always be avoided. It is especially tiring to the eyes, and for this reason the light should be from above. If you are right-handed, it should come from over the left shoulder and if you are left handed from over the right shoulder.

Facing the light is particularly bad for your eyes, since the light is reflected back into them. A diffused light is much easier on the eyes than one which produces a glare. Do not read in the bright sunlight. Dark glasses afford excellent protection for your eyes, but they should be worn only in the bright sunlight or you will become too accustomed to their twilight effect. Because a glossy surface throws the light back into eyes, a paper with dull finish is easier on your eyesight.

Rest Eyes Occasionally.

Everyone seems to take it for granted that reading in bed is bad for the eyes but it hurts them only if you are not propped up sufficiently or if you read at an abnormal angle, or have inadequate light. It may, however be, very harmful for you to read if you are convalescing from a serious illness. Illness is followed by weakness and then your eyes may be easily strained. You should ask your doctor's permission to read under these conditions.

Never read looking down at the book, as this tends to congest the head and eyes. You should hold your book about 14 inches from the eyes and about 15 degrees below them.

It is a good practice to occasionally rest the eyes when you are engaged in close work. Turn off the light for a minute or two and close the eyes, or look off into the distance. The more you endeavor to see things at a distance the better it is for your eyes.

And now, after all this, if you would like special information as to the preservation of your eyesight, write to the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, New York City.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Sept. 4.

THE TWO lady authors who have burst into the spotlight within the past month have been unusually interesting critters. Marjorie Hillis we know—or know of — from her first and amazingly successful book, "Live Alone and Like It", certainly one of the finest titles that ever leaped full-armed from a lady's skull. Now she turns loose the story of seven career women, in verse, and a skillful, moving job it is—for women. Men won't know what it is all about, save those wretches, like my spouse, who is married to one.

ALICE HUGHES.

The second is a 28-year-old girl named Margaret Halsey, a dark youngster with a lovely smile, whose brother-in-law is Dick Simon, of Simon & Shuter, her publishers. Not that that made any great difference with her witty, peppy book, "With Malice Toward Some", about which local literary critics have turned handsprings and done head-stands. As I have mentioned before, they have compared Margaret to Dorothy Parker.

• • • •

This is silly, for Margaret's book stands alone. Its story of her adventures in England, together with her professor husband (divinely tall and most divinely laisse-faire), is one of the funniest, most delightful and meat-packed books in years. She went to early school in our neighboring city of Yonkers; she worked in a bank, then at Simon & Schuster, and finally she married the boss' brother.

• • • •

As she says in the book, "she had German measles on her wedding day"—a hot start for any marriage. Later she went to Teachers' College at Columbia, and then began the trip to England, which evoked the book. When I saw her she was off to her summer home at Arlington, Vt., where she can be as funny as she pleases. Great girl, this Halsey. But the trick is to wait for book two—the well-known acid test. Book one is a pip!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Our Mrs. Mary Felicia suffered from a tragic handicap—yet one not unknown to song and story. She can't resist a uniform. Be it soldier, gob, marine or what-not, Mary's a goner when she sees him. Only a few nights ago Blushing Traffic Cop Ram had her before Judge Sabbatino, charging that she did shatter the peace by causing a crowd to collect when she hugged and kissed him. Poor Mary. She'll be sentenced later for this uniform-crush!

• • • •

Who should be in town but Zasu Pitts, of the helplessly waving hands, making personal appearances at a Broadway movie basilica! But listen to this. Zasu breakfasts every morning with one of our top beauticians, whose art is being devoted to wiping that wan and wistful smile from her famous face. It's not that Zasu wants to be a glamor girl—just that she wants a slightly happier grin. She likes our town and its nice fresh money, but she aches to get back to her favorite spot, the round kitchen in her home. Nice going, kid—I'll bet you shake up a mean dish, too.

• • • •

Late in October Geraldine Farrar, the retired dream girl of the Metropolitan, turns loose her autobiography, to be called "Such Sweet Compulsion." I unhesitatingly award that the worst-title prize for 1938 . . .

• • • •

I have a letter from Toni Friselle, who takes the elegant pictures in Vogue, telling me that she is shooting the natives at frolic on the beach. Toni snaps from a high tower, so she can get all those angles!

• • • •

A health institute in the East Fifties here (no name on request) suggests that exercises be done while riding in taxicabs—usually wasted time. Things like leg-stretching, even complete relaxation for the good of the innards. Well, I can only say to those who have ridden a few miles through traffic in New York taxis find that exercise takes care of itself. Especially the vocabulary.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Strangely, the calmest part of the republic is under the control of turbulent Secretary Ickes, sternest of our high officials. If the national parks took color from Mr. Ickes' official temperament, there would be a gale blowing through them much of the time. Around the house he's reputed to be tamer.

Mrs. Ickes
. . . hubby's parks

* * * *

So far, the New Dealers have evolved no plan for compulsory visits to the parks by the underprivileged. Free excursion trains filled with WPA workers and their families, vacation caravans of direct reliefers, are not yet part of the more abundant life.

Maybe "Strength Through Joy" trips are the one Nazi innovation we might well imitate.

* * * *

Even without them, more than 15,000,000 Americans visited the republic's pleasure parks this year, in the mad whirl of vacations, and the officials of the National Park Service are looking around a little anxiously to see how many giant redwoods, bears, boulders and geysers the 1938 tourists took home. (One year a pow-wow of college sorority girls absconded with 200 towels from Yellowstone.)

"—the rapacious tourist"

You and I may see no chances to get rich quick as we roam through Yosemite, Yellowstone or Shenandoah National Park. But there are certain shrewd gentry who never overlook a bet. They see income in cactus, profits in waterfalls, and they besiege Mr. Ickes' men with applications for free tickets to the higher tax brackets.

* * * *

Some big fortunes have been squeezed out of the public domain, but nowadays the Government is wisely a little stingier. The lady found this out who asked permission to tote home ashes and cinders from volcanic lava beds.

The medicinal roots and herbs wizards are forever after Mr. Ickes, but they don't get even one scrap of cas ara bark.

* * * *

To you and me, cactus and Yucca are part of the landscape; to some people they're cash in the bank. They've conned and teased for New Mexico's clay, Florida's turpentine, sand and gravel, stone in Utah, moss, Oregon's pitch and even for sunken logs in the Mississippi; some have wanted to go into the Christmas tree business with Mr. Ickes' blessing, but he won't give it.

"—that innate grabbiness"

Most Americans, not cursed with much acquisitive urge, are content if they can collect one rock from each of the 48 States, each as big as a man's head. But Ickes says no, not even one cone of a sequoia; they'll have to swipe 'em off some private citizen's land, or risk a $500 fine if the ranger looks around too quickly.

* * * *

That innate human grabbiness comes to the surface on the public lands . . . Small boys who are fairly law-abiding at home try to lasso a deer, and little girls want to take a real live teddy Bear home. Though the park rules fill 22 pages, Americans think the law of the wild prevails, and that the landscape is entirely ferae naturae and may be taken home in little pieces.

* * * *

If each of the 15,000,000 took home a rock, a shrub, an evergreen branch and a handful of flowers, the parks would soon assume a strangely nude appearance . . . If Mr. Ickes took his new bride out to see his parks, she would raise an eyebrow; the scenery might soon come to resemble the bad lands of South Dakota. So do as Mr. Ickes says; if he says don't start out alone to climb Mount Rasher, he probably knows what he's talking about.

Sisters Hurt in Auto Collision

Carolyn Nicely, 2, and her sister, Mary, 8, of Temple Heights, Md., are shown in Precinct No. 4 waiting for their father to take them home after they had escaped with minor injuries when their father's auto overturned in a collision at Fourth and M streets northwest last night. The children were treated at Emergency Hospital, then brought to the police station. Their mother, Mrs. Meredith Nicely, was critically injured.

2 Deaths Mar Holiday; Heat Jams Beaches

Dwight Souder, 42, Suffers a Heart Attack; Fisherman Drowns.

Baby and Athlete Hurt in Crash Die in Hospital.

Two water deaths marred the Labor Day Sunday as a 15-degree rise in temperature sent near-record crowds flocking to nearby Virginia and Maryland beaches. Although traffic on all highways leading into the District was heavy, there were few major auto accidents.

The mercury, which reached a high of only 73 on Saturday, jumped into the nineties yesterday.

Meanwhile, a baby and a high school athlete died of injuries they suffered in an automobile accident Friday night. Their deaths raised to 64 the year's traffic fatalities in the District. The toll this time last year was 70.

At North Beach, Md., Dwight Souder, 42, of 3218 Tenth street northeast, suffered a heart attack while swimming.

Fisherman Drowns.

Joe Harris, colored, of 3639 N street northwest, was drowned in the C. & O. canal at Thirty-sixth and M streets northwest when he slipped off the bank while fishing. Harbor police recovered the body.

Souder, a District letter carrier, and two friends, E. L. Wilson, of 608 Keefer place northwest, and W. L. Thomas, of 421 Fourth street northeast, had left on a fishing trip in a motorboat. A half mile from the North Beach shore the motor stalled. In an effort to start it again, Souder jumped onto a sandbar, shoulder deep in water, to give the boat a push.

Another boat came along, and offered to tow the stalled craft to shore. Souder decided to swim ashore. When he failed to show up, a search was made, and the body was recovered 1½ miles off the beach. Dr. Grafton Bailey said the death was due to exhaustion, and probably a heart attack.

Muriel June Lanham, 2 years old, of 526 Ninth street southeast, died at 11:30 a. m. yesterday in Casualty Hospital. Marion Wood, 20, of 510 Tenth street southeast, died in the same hospital at 7:10 p. m. They were among eight persons injured Friday when a liquor-laden auto, fleeing from Federal agents, plunged into their automobile.

Mrs. Addie C. Nicely, 32, of Temple Heights, Md., suffered face injuries and a possible fractured skull when an automobile turned over after a collision. She was taken to Providence Hospital. At Emergency Hospital Mary P. Nicely, 8, and her sister, Carolyn, 2, were treated for minor injuries. Meredith Nicely, 34, husband of the injured woman, was not hurt.

Child Runs Into Fender.

Louise Clark, 24, of 916 Massachusetts avenue northwest, suffered a broken arm when a car operated by James W. Clark, of 2425 Third street northeast, collided at Benning road and Kenilworth avenue northeast.

June E. Skinner, 2, colored, of 1128 Eighth street northwest, sustained minor injuries when she ran into the fender of an auto at Ninth and K streets northwest.

Two women were hurt in an accident on Mount Vernon boulevard near Collingwood and treated at Alexandria Hospital. The women, Mrs. Lillian E. Kimble, 45, of 5371 Nevada avenue northwest, and Mrs. Dora P. Preas, 38, of Berwick, Pa., were riding in an auto driven by Lester N. Kimble, 48, of the Nevada avenue address, authorities said.

Emory Smith, 22, of 317 Kentucky avenue southeast, escaped unnurt when his car overturned in a smashup with a cab driven by Willis Davis, of 1331 Harvard street northwest.

Mrs. Sarah Langley, 26, of 1235 Holbrook terrace northeast, passenger in the cab, fainted. Her daughter, Catherine, 2, was bruised slightly.

George W. Back, 44, of 3330 Prospect street northwest, was treated for head injuries at Georgetown Hospital following a collision at Bank and Prospect streets northwest. Edward Lunceford, 21, of Gainesville, Va., was charged with colliding.

Canon Jones Urges End of Partisanship

True Righteousness Will Settle Strikes, He Says at Cathedral.

Capital, Unions Should Emulate Christ, Plea at Evensong.

"What would be the attitude of Christ if He were here in the flesh and faced a large modern industrial strike?" asked Cannon Everett H. Jones at evensong services in Washington Cathedral yesterday.

The Saviour, Cannon Jones said, "would not be a partisan of labor or capital. He would be a partisan of righteousness. He would lift men above their selfish narrowness to a larger whole which includes all men as members of the family of God."

Because Christ is not here in the flesh, he concluded, "that task is ours . . . The same fairness, the same human sympathy, the same demand for justice and fair play that he would show we must show in all the tangled economic relations of today—or else we fail as His disciples."

The inspiration of Labor Day came from the conceptions of the social prophets of Israel, accepted and reiterated by Jesus, according to the Rev. Edward Slater Dunlap, who preached the morning sermon.

He asserted that Labor Day "becomes, in its celebration of the rights of the worker and the dignity of personality, a signpost in the advance of the progress toward fuller life that is always beckoning to men."

2 Virginians Die in Traffic Over Holiday

Both Labor Day Week-End Victims Struck by Hit-and-Run Drivers.

By the Associated Press.

Hit-and-run drivers were responsible for the first two Labor Day week-end highway fatalities reported yesterday in Virginia.

William Argenbright, 29, Staunton, met instant death when struck by a car as he walked along the highway just east of that city yesterday.

Sheriff G. M. Kilkeson, of Augusta County, and State Patrolmen A. R. Bryant and D. R. Haskett investigated. They reported that Argenbright, walking on the right side of the road, was dragged about 35 yards.

Tilson Rasnake, 25, of Russell County, was killed shortly before midnight Saturday near the Russell-Washington County line. Rasnake was found in the middle of the highway by a Bristol ambulance driver and he died en route to a hospital.

A man tentatively identified from papers in his pockets as Harry Denham, 60, of 48 H street northeast, was struck down and critically injured by a hit-run car at H street, between First and North Capitol streets, early today.

Within 15 minutes police found an abandoned taxicab in the rear of 420 R street northwest, believed to be the hit-run car.

At Sibley Hospital the injured man was found to have sustained head wounds, and a gash across the abdomen.

Selfishness Sin Of Era, Bible Students Told

Dr. Beaven Calls 'Spiritual Immaturity' Perilous at D. C. Conclave.

The "spiritual immaturity of some Christians is threatening the very existence of the church, Dr. Albert W. Beaven, president of Colgate Rochester Divinity School, yesterday warned 400 delegates attending the seventeenth annual summer conference of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, convening on the campus of Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md.

"Like babies, they are the very incarnation of selfishness, and try to control the situation by their emotions," charged the speaker, addressing the Church Hour Assembly in Alumni Hall. "They want what they want when they want it, and if they don't get it, they howl for it," he said.

Life Two-way Street.

"They want the values of Christianity without its responsibilities," he continued, "but the Christian life is a mixture of getting and giving, of privileges and responsibilities."

"Twenty-five and 50-year-old babies are our greatest disease," Dr. Beaven said. "When they get in politics, they become grafters, when they get in business, they crush everyone under foot, and when they enter religion, they either tear down the church or leave it entirely.

"If this is the quality of the people attending church today, is the church prepared to meet the tests of the future?" he asked.

The National Brass and Petworth Baptist quartets were on the program, over which Vice President Irving L. Koch presided. Participating were William S. Jones, vice president of the District of Columbia Sunday School Association; William Galt Mish, Mrs. Etta Zahn, L. Ray Torpy and the Rev. Clarence Cook, who pronounced the benediction.

Bible Class Held.

Earlier in the day, in Baker Chapel, Vice President N. R. Robinson conducted a Bible Class hour, highlighted by an address given by George S. Duncan, of the Y. M. C. A. School of Religion, American University. Mrs. H. N. Stull and J. T. Ellett also took part.

Preceding the Church Hour, a forum of Bible class work was held in Alumni Hall, with Page McK. Etchison, president of the Organized Bible Class Association, the principal speaker. Promotion and publicity problems were later discussed, with George E. Harris, executive secretary, leading.

Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Cummings, E. M. Bryan, P. L. Rodgers and Page McK. Etchison, who attended the first conference in Leesburg 17 years ago, were present. Charles Hensle traveled 225 miles from Mount Vernon, N. Y., to participate in the meeting of the National Federation of Men's Bible Classes, which always holds executive sessions at the Westminster Conference. Hensle is Federation treasurer. Eleven-month-old Barbara Jean Patterson, daughter of John A. Patterson, jr., one of the registrars, was youngest delegate, while Dr. Charles Ladson, 78, was the oldest.

'Happy Am I' Stirs Devil's Ire—So He Sets Elder's Church Afire

Elder Lightfoot Michaux, "Happy Am I" evangelist, made things hot out at Griffith Stadium last night. He belabored the devil and stood right up to him and let him have it.

He was preaching to a crowd who had come out to the first of a series of rallies advertised by bright red circulars announcing "We Got the Devil on the Run." And while he was belaboring, his Church of God at 2020 Georgia avenue northwest caught fire.

Elder Michaux explained it.

"It's easy," said he. "Out there we got the devil on the run. We got him on the run and he just ran by the church and tried to set it afire."

Police also had an explanation.

Three colored boys, they said, 12 or 14 years old, smashed a rear window and tossed inside blazing paper billets soaked in kerosene. There just happened to be inside two colored men who promptly stamped out the fire and frightened away the satanic trio.

Chiefly endangered were the Sunday clothes of the choir, who had changed in the church to the vestments they wore at the stadium.

Winchester Area Workers Refused Hall for Parley

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 4.—N. H. Eagle, representative of the United Rubber Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate, balked in his efforts to obtain a hall in which to convene workers of the O'Sullivan Rubber Co., issued a signed statement in which he declared "It becomes apparent that these workers are to be denied the civil right of free assemblage."

The meetings were to have been held for two shifts on Saturday night and for a third shift this morning.

Eagle made no statement regarding future plans when he found the Sarah Zane Fire Company would not permit the meetings to be held in the company hall despite an agreement which Capt. Loring Crabill stated was reached before the purpose of the meeting was disclosed.

Va. Game Bureau Revamping Urged

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Sept. 4.—Sportsmen from Piedmont Virginia have gone on record here in favor of a complete reorganization of the State game department, its divorce from politics and a totally new system of appointing game wardens.

The nimrods and fishermen passed resolutions directed to the legislative commission headed by Maitland Bustard, of this city, which is to investigate the whole game situation in this State and made it clear that they feel that these natural resources of the State are not being preserved as they should be, and that there is "too much politics" in the supervision of hunting and fishing generally.

Instead of purely political appointments of game wardens, the sportsmen would like to see something approaching a civil service system which would insure men fitted for the job being placed in supervisory positions.

Orange Board Is Urged To Ask Courthouse Fund

Orange, Va., Sept. 4 (AP).—The Orange County Board of Supervisors has been petitioned by a mass meeting of citizens to seek PWA aid in the construction of a new courthouse here.

Judge A. T. Browning, among those urging such a project, said Orange needed additional court facilities and said other counties in his circuit had recently improved their courthouses.

Burglary Suspect Reported Starved; Inquiry Ordered

An investigation will be opened today into reports a colored burglary suspect was held without sleep or food two days and nights in a squad room at police headquarters, Capt. Ira E. Keck, acting chief of detectives, said last night.

Detectives who questioned the man said he was given food and water or soft drinks whenever he asked for them.

"I don't believe he was kept awake all that time," Capt. Keck said. "However, I am going to look into this. I will get full reports from officers working on the case." He ordered the man taken to the Third Precinct station last night.

The suspect was arrested last week in connection with the robbery of the home of Dr. Frederick Morhart, 1704 Sixteenth street northwest. Police said a streetcar pass stolen from the Morhart home was in his possession and that he has a record of 13 convictions for housebreakings.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 4 (AP).—Arrests for drunkenness in Virginia cities during the calendar year 1937 decreased 5.49 per cent as compared with 1936, it is shown in the records of the alcoholic beverage control board. State Committeewoman Backs Tydings as 'Liberal Democrat'

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 4.—Mrs. James Gustavus Whiteley, a member of the Maryland State Central Committee from Baltimore and a former Democratic congressional committeewoman from Maryland, called today for the re-election of Senator Tydings on his record "as a forward-looking man, a liberal and a Democrat."

In an address prepared for broadcast, Mrs. Whiteley said Marylanders must choose their Senator themselves, "because he is to represent us. If he is chosen by outside influences, he will represent those outside influences and not Maryland. A Senator is not a soldier in a political army, obeying the orders of a superior officer. He is the representative of a State, freely elected by his fellow citizens."

Mrs. Whiteley said Tydings was not one who "goes along," but, "whether supporting or opposing measures submitted to the Senate, Senator Tydings has thrown his whole force into the contest.

"As there have been many Senators to support Administration measures and sometimes only a few to oppose them, . . . the Maryland Senator stands out before the country as a man who dares to have a mind and conscience of his own."

Palace Anniversary Recalls Passing Art

By Gerald G. Gross.
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

"THE RKO Palace, Broadway at Forty-seventh street, New York, which at one time was generally regarded as the leading vaudeville house of the world, celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary this week," says a small item in the latest issue of Motion Picture Herald.

In commemoration of this silver jubilee, the theater which for two decades was the Shangri La, the seventh heaven, the career climax of every variety player; the theater which made a symbol of the word Palace, is presenting the following:

"LITTLE TOUGH GUY" also "MEET THE GIRLS."

That provocative combination constitutes what is known in the film trade as a double feature, and said double feature is in lights on the marquee that once announced the personal appearances of Moran and Mack, Toto the Clown, Al Jolson, Elsie Janis, Marilyn Miller, the Four Mortons, George M. Cohan and other stars of the two-a-day world.

Perhaps it was inevitable, but that makes it no less sad, this change in the old Palace that has taken place in the last five or six years. But the thing I wished to stress was the relationship between that twenty-fifth anniversary and our own vaudeville entertainment in Washington.

On the current bill at Loew's Capitol is, to disinter a word, a monologist. His name is Johnny Burke, and he gags about his experiences as a war-time recruit in khaki.

In the old days rarely a week passed that the variety temple of Times Square did not have a monologist on the program, and it was the same at the vaudeville houses in Indianapolis, Cleveland, Omaha—everywhere, including Washington. Today, however, the comedian—teams as well as "singles"—is a rare sight behind the footlights. Indeed, Johnny Burke had better watch out for scouts from the Smithsonian.

Whether it was the depression, the rise of radio, the movies, a sudden paucity of funny men, or what, that brought on the decline of the monologist, I leave for you to argue among yourselves. All I'm doing is publicly congratulating myself that, after having practically given up hope, I have seen and heard again a representative of a vanishing species which seems to be going the way of the passenger pigeon and the dodo.

And to judge by the Capitol audience's response to Johnny's patter on opening day, maybe there are a few others who feel the same way about it. Yes, upon recalling the antiquity of his jokes, I'm sure of it.

• • • •

So after all that palaver about the dearth of funny men on the stage, along comes Loew's announcing that Richard "Red" Skelton will headline the vaudeville at the Capitol for a semi-fortnight beginning Friday. But I don't retract. "Red" is not a monologist, relying for his laughs upon a combination of the spoken word and such "business" as immersing a certain type of pastry in a cup containing an imaginary service of Brazil's most important export. Such endeavor provokes hilarity, but I don't believe I'm hiding behind a technicality when I say that Mr. Skelton is not a monologist. But hold—here it says that Britt Wood, another comedian, will be among the other acts. Sure, but he plays a harmonica, too.

Playing hookey from school launched Chester Morris on his theatrical career, though he does not recommend such monkeyshines to other stage-struck youngsters.

LFI Chester was a student in Mount Vernon, N. Y., when he went A. W. O. L. one day to seek a part in a silent film being made at a nearby studio. When William Morris, his father, learned what had happened he resignedly wrote a part for the heir in the vaudeville act in which Mr. and Mrs. Morris were appearing.

"And from then on I traveled with my parents," says the actor who headlines the coming stage bill at Warner Bros. Earle, "going to school in hotels, having tutors engaged in the various cities where we played."

Morris played in stock for three seasons. His first Broadway appearance was with Lionel Barrymore in "The Copperhead." He was catapulted to screen fame with his role in "Alibi."

Labor Day will have a literal meaning to Phil Harris. The personable orchestra leader will present five complete stage shows at the Earle today. "Four's a Crowd," the film feature, will be unspooled six times. For the schedules consult time tables on this page.

The Playwrights' Producing Co., that new firm in which Anderson, Behrman, Howard, Rice and Sherwood are pooling their ambitions, forwards news of several important names in the theater, namely, Katherine Cornell, Cornelia Otis Skinner, Raymond Massey and Brian Aherne.

Miss Cornell, it is announced, has just arrived in New York from her summer home at Martha's Vineyard to begin rehearsals on the Biblical play, "Herod and Miriamne." After five months in retreat 200 miles from Broadway, during which time she studied her Miramne role carefully, put on some weight and devoured a mess of detective stories, Miss Cornell is ready to plunge into active work on the drama whose locale is Jerusalem at the time of the birth of Christ.

"Herod and Miramne" will be tried out in Washington, among other cities.

Miss Skinner, outstanding box office star of the summer theater circuit in New York State and New England, denies reports she plans to abandon the "one-woman show," by which she first became famous. Just the same, she will appear with Brian Aherne in a revival of the Restoration comedy, "The Beaux' Strategem."

Massey, soon to be seen here in the film "Drums," arrives in New York today on the Queen Mary to commence rehearsals on the playwright group's second production of the autumn-winter season, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." (The first will be "Knickerbocker Holiday," a musical comedy starring Walter Huston.)

The latest of a string of dramas based upon episodes in the life of the Great Emancipator (who remembers Frank McGlynn in "Abraham Lincoln?"), the forthcoming production is by Robert E. Sherwood and is tentatively booked to open at the National here on October 3.

"Three Loves Has Nancy," which should be seen at least twice, is now "premiering" at Loew's Capitol and next Friday there will be still another premiere at the same theater. It will be "Hold That Co-ed," in which John Barrymore, who once set a Broadway record for consecutive performances in something called "Hamlet," is reported to pursue girl collegians across the campus a la Harpo Marx, search for a female fullback to play on the football team, etc. O tempora, O mores.

Cleanup: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's motorized exhibit of Marionette Moviettes will arrive here Thursday, heralding the launching of "Marie Antoinette" at the Palace Friday . . . Washington is one of the first stands of the puppet theater . . . it may be sent to Canada, Europe and other foreign climes eventually . . . those are real U. S. Army tanks you will see in "Army Girl," next at the Metropolitan . . . "Hello Franco," a playlet on imaginary adventures of American boys with the Lincoln Brigade in Spain, will be presented by the Y. C. L. Thespians at a week-end outing sponsored by the Washington Communist Party next Saturday and Sunday at Camp Nitgedaiget, Upper Marlboro, Md. . . . "The Texans," after a week at the Capitol, comes into the Columbia on Friday . . . the terrific fist fight between Humphrey Bogart and George Brent is one of the last scenes in "Racket Busters," which follows "Four's a Crowd" at the Earle . . . nevertheless, it was photographed on the first day of shooting . . . Hollywood's funny that way.

Wins First Heart After Four Years

He understands it from the masculine point of view, having had to wait four years to win his first heart on the screen.

Hunter lost Myrna Loy to Warner Baxter in "To Mary, With Love." Since then he has lost many of filmdom's loveliest ladies because he was "noble," or because the ladies had other plans.

Wooed and not won by Hunter in the past were Bette Davis, Kay Francis and Barbara Stanwyck, among others. But the "Hunter New Deal in Romance" begins in "The Sisters," in which Warner Bros. permit him to win Miss Davis.

The only catch is that he catches Bette on the rebound after Errol Flynn has jilted her.

Classic Music.

Miliza Korjus, Vienna opera star and Continental beauty making her screen debut in "The Great Waltz," listens to 3 hours of classical music on her phonograph every day, no matter what her activities may be.

Old Clothes.

Wallace Berry never throws any of his clothes away, saving them instead for his screen roles. The outfit he wears in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Stablemates" is 15 years old.

Five Fine Fellows Who'll Fare Forth Friday

LOOKS LIKE THIS IS A MAN'S WORLD.
The glad-handing quartet is comprised of Ralph Byrd, H. B. Warner, Neil Hamilton and Ralph Morgan, coming to the Metropolitan in "Army Girl" (Madge Evans is the girl). Due south of Mr. Morgan is, of course, Red Skelton, D. D. D. (Doctor of Doughnut Dunking), who'll sink or swim on the Capitol's next stage bill.

RICHARD WHITNEY, the broker who now is in Sing Sing, always insisted that his was the true Whitney family—and that he was not related to the Payne Whitney family. The Eden Musee at Coney Island now numbers among its wax exhibits the figure of Richard Whitney in prison clothes. The sign reads "Richard Payne Whitney" . . . Irene Purcell will leave for Australia, where she'll play in "The Women" . . . Vicki Baum's new libretto for "Martha" will be heard by a Broadway audience this fall. The nineteenth century light opera will be presented in modern dress.

NEWSPAPERS ANNOUNCED that Dixie Davis, under direct examination by Dewey, had confessed that he was present when Jules Martin was murdered. District Attorney Ranney, of Rensselaer County, also disclosed that he had received a detailed report about the murder from Davis—who had brought the victim to Troy . . . This story appeared in this space five days ago. Before printing it I asked Thomas E. Dewey whether it's true that Davis had signed a statement explaining the Martin murder, and that the up-State prosecutor was investigating Dixie's share in it . . . "I never make comment about my witnesses," was the ever-helpful Dewey's reply—and then he added: "But doesn't that sound so ridiculous!"

MEMBERS OF THE DANCE CLASS of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the strongest union in America, have requested Arthur Murray to send an instructor to their headquarters. The dancers want to learn London's swankiest dance—the Lambeth walk . . . One of the legal questions which, for some strange reason, never was brought up in the testimony of Dixie Davis was whether he, as attorney for Schultz, could reveal the conversations he had with Schultz. Such conversations are privileged and can be waived only by the client . . . Congressman O'Connor is hiring anti-Tammany men at his new headquarters for his primary fight.

CHIP ROBERT, secretary of the National Democratic Committee, is opposing the President's purge of anti-New Deal Democrats . . . The Stock Exchange has had another economy wave. The officials went over the pay roll list and fired the higher-salaried executives—four $10,000-a-year men. Eugene Lockey, the publicity director, was retained . . . May Stop Emoting And Be a Director

In "Mr. Moto's Last Warning," movie fans may be seeing Ricardo Cortez on the screen for the last time.

Cortez, who began his long and successful screen career as Greta Garbo's first leading man and has since appeared in over 250 films, is now under contract to 20th Century-Fox as an actor, writer and director. Having been an integral part during story conferences for the sixth of the Moto series starring Peter Lorre, the only part of his contract which remains unfilled is directing.

"When my chance to direct comes," explained Cortez, "and if my directorial work is acceptable, it will be my desire to retire as an actor and spend my days in motion pictures from a place behind the camera instead of emoting before it."

Trans-Lux

Highlights of the new Trans-Lux program are such timely shots as the incidents of Maj. Alexander Seversky cracking the transcontinental flight record to 10 hours, Japanese planes blasting Hankow in a new offensive, devastating floods in China, New York Quakers harboring Jewish refugees, Charlie McCarthy receiving his degree from Northwestern University, the G. O. P. cornfield confab, Tammany Leader Curry as witness at the Hines trial, and U. S. S. Pansy's hero, Lieut. Anders, being honored.

War Admiral winning at Saratoga in a spectacular burst of speed is conspicuous in the sports events.

The short subjects include a travelogue to the old towns of Normandy and "Sur Heroes" showing life guards in some exciting rescues. The Disney cartoon, "Wynkan, Blynken and Nod," is a gem.

Finally, a pictorial assembly takes one on a pleasant trip "Down the Potomac," and another joyous jaunt to see the animals fed at the Zoo. These separated by an exhibition of art photography of which various cloud formations supply the motive.

Joan Woodbury Is In Reporter Series

Joan Woodbury has been signed by 20th Century-Fox for her third consecutive picture there, "While New York Sleeps," second of the Rambling Reporters features in which Michael Whalen and Chick Chandler have the top roles. Miss Woodbury is now working in Jane Withers's "Down to Earth," and before that appeared in "Passport Husband."

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 4.—Selznick set the last round-up for retakes on the "Young in Heart" the last Sunday. Doug, jr. came from Lone Pine, where he's been sweating over "Gunga Din," Janet Gaynor postponed her trip to Honolulu and now won't be able to take it; Minnie Dupree was brought on from Maine; Roland Young was borrowed from Hal Roach, where he's working in "Topper Takes a Trip," and ditto Billie Burke. But midnight Saturday, they weren't able to locate the director. So, the retakes were postponed.

HEDDA HOPPER

For the same picture they brought Lucille Watson from New York and teamed her with Irvin Cobb, put things in scenes which were never in the original story. It sounds like an epic to me.

The temperature flirted around 105, but the "Jesse James" location in Missouri drew 21,000 spectators last week-end. The company doctor devoted his time to reviving visitors cased in from the heat. Every day players have been sending back to the studio for more make-up. Technicolor being a cruel taskmaster in a torrid zone.

Lani Lynn, New Jersey songbird, is being tested by Metro with three other studios on her trail. Her parents are factory workers and don't own a piano. Lani learned to sing from victrola records of great singers. Cute, and looks something like Judy Garland.

The baby panda, brought here by Mrs. William K. Harkness, jr., from the Yangtze River in China and which drew a crowd of 60,000 a day to the Chicago Brookfield Zoo, will be immortalized by Walter Lantz as the leading character in one of his animated cartoons. "Twill be known as "Andy Panda."

Lantz is also making a dog picture and the studio call sheet the other day read: "To all employes. We'll rehearse dogs from 9 to 1, then shoot them."

Claudette Colbert never goes into a picture without wearing an old dressing gown which she used in the first picture she did at Paramount. Her maid's superstition has kept her doing it. The gown is so patched it looks like an old bed quilt.

Joseph Mullroy has acquired a new occupation. He's now known as a candle painter at Paramount. Over 5,000 natural tallow candles were used in "If I Were King," which, on the screen, stood out like sore thumbs. So Joe painted them a dusty pink.

A long time ago when his studio wanted Brynie Foy to give his criticism on "Waiting at the Church," he sent in the following: "Waiting at the Church—pew." He's not been bothered since.

Cabaret Career Now Preferred By Patricia Ellis

Singing for Billy Rose Is Relief to Erstwhile 'Queen of B's.'

By Frank Young.

New York, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—Patricia Ellis, the blonde ingenue of more motion pictures than she cares to recall, relaxed on a green divan in her penthouse apartment 32 stories above Park avenue today and explained why she has given up the movies for music.

This "Queen of the B's," under the tutelage of Al Siegel, ace singing coach, currently is appearing in Billy Rose's new Casa Manana show. It is the first time that she has appeared in a Broadway theater and the first time that she has sung on a stage.

"I was just getting in a rut in Hollywood," the 20-year-old honey-haired honey said. "I made more than 40 pictures in about four years at Warner Brothers and last year I free lanced. I'm not very proud of some of those last ones."

In her appearances before the movie cameras, Miss Ellis played pretty much the same kind of role in the same type of picture—the second half of a double feature—hence her title, "Queen of the B's."

"I want to start a new career—singing," she said. "I would like to go into a musical in New York or in London. I certainly don't want to go back to Hollywood now because I'd be right back where I started.

"I sang in a few pictures, not musicals; you know, just a chorus or so. Then last summer I went to England and appeared in 'The Gaiety Girls,' a musical picture.

"Since April, I've been working with Al Siegel and now I'm making first stage appearance alone."

Siegel is the amazing young man who makes a specialty of taking girls whose voices have possibilities and training them until they become stars. His most famous protege was Ethel Merman. Others have been Bee Palmer and Lillian Shade. For the past two years he has been voice coach at Paramount studios, tutoring Carole Lombard, Dorothy Lamour, et al, in the finer points of vocalization.

The critics opening night liked Miss Ellis' singing and general stage presence although all noticed that she seemed to be nervous.

"I guess I was nervous then, but I think I've gotten over it now," she said. "After all, I haven't appeared before an audience in so long that I probably was a little shaky."

Miss Ellis was appearing in Chamberlain Brown's stock company about five years ago in uptown New York theaters when a Hollywood talent scout decided that she should be emoting in the cinema capital. Off she went to Hollywood on a six-month contract and for nearly six months she did exactly nothing. As her contract was about to run out, she learned that George Arliss was looking for an ingenue. She talked to him and got the part. Warner Brothers took up her option and she has been busy ever since.

Little

From one end of the Capital's theater section to the other, as well as in the "neighborhoods" and suburban movie houses, "Mayerling" has been exhibited during these past several months. For all that, it rates a second consecutive week at the Little.

What more can be said about "Mayerling?" By now it is well-known that this quasi-historical production was judged the best imported film of its season by the New York Critics' Circle, that its stars are Danielle Darrieux and Charles Boyer, that it is one of the most compelling tragedies ever screened.

Nothing more than a reminder that "Mayerling" cannot go on forever, and admirers of cinematic artistry will be doing themselves a wrong if they don't walk up to the boxoffice soon, seems to be called for in this space.

Yankees Turn Back Nats, 7 to 4, in Battle of Home Runs

Sports — The Washington Post — Sports

* WASHINGTON: MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1938 13

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 4.—The little man said "Anybody can throw a forward pass, there's no trick in that; the trick is to turn the pass loose at the right time. That's how forward passes are completed and that's why Sammy Baugh is the best passer football ever saw."

POVICH.

Dutch Meyer doesn't look like a football coach. At first glance you'd tab him as somebody who stepped from behind a file case in the Agriculture Department after some nimble work with his finger tips. But he's the head coach at Texas Christian University and he taught Baugh how to throw forward passes.

"But he'd have been a fine passer under any coach," said Meyer, waiving all credit for the development of Slingin' Sammy. "He has certain traits that makes a good football player. At any other school he'd have been just as successful. But when he came to me at T. C. U. he was just a tall, skinny kid who could throw the ball far.

"He was like hundreds of other Texas kids—forward pass conscious. He had a nice pair of hands and he could make that ball travel, but he was crude as college passers go. No deception, no finesse, and he didn't know exactly when to turn that ball loose.

Anticipates Receivers.

"But he learned plenty fast. He didn't like to quit throwing those long passes, but we forced him to. When he began having some luck with those short flips, he was satisfied. But he became a great forward passer because he had kind of a sixth sense. He was a good passer instinctively.

"He didn't hold that ball too long, for one thing. He anticipated when his receivers were going to cut for the ball and he laid it out there for 'em. It was all a matter of timing aside from the ordinary fundamentals of pass throwing. But there's another reason why Sammy Baugh has made good in the professional league."

Another reason?

"Yes, you'll notice it if you watch Baugh closely. Did you ever see him flinch? I'll answer that question for you. He never does. He's cool out there, and calm. He doesn't get panicky no matter what the situation is. I've seen him hold that ball until I though he'd be murdered by big fellows pouring through the line, but Sammy wasn't annoyed.

"He keeps his head longer out there than any passer I ever saw. He never turns that ball loose until he's ready or his receivers are ready. He squeezes every second out of the situation and that's why he completes more passes. He doesn't throw the ball simply to get rid of it. That forward-passing record of his in Texas was no fluke. He was simply the best passer in a section where I believe they have the finest passers."

S. M. U. Set Style.

There isn't much doubt that the Southwest Conference is the hotbed of forward passing and set the style for the dazzling aerial attacks which every other section has now mimicked. Forward passing is natural to Texas teams. The weather is too warm for too much body contact and the teams in this section are rarely hampered by the wet fields in the North and East.

Southern Methodist set the style for the highly specialized passing game. Teams in the Southwest Conference were playing good football for years but getting little recognition until Southern Methodist with its tricky passing stuff invaded the East, almost upset Notre Dame, and beat Army, Navy and Fordham. The Mustangs brought a new respect for Texas football and that respect was heightened when Southern Methodist, after its conquests in the East, was bumped off regularly by other Texas colleges.

When an Eastern or Middle Western team throws as many as 20 passes a game, that team is apt to be known as pass-crazy. But in the TCU-Arkansas game a couple of years ago, Sammy Baugh threw 48 passes. And the Arkansas backs threw 49. Within the past two years, Arkansas has taken the lead in the forward passing game and in Dwight Sloan and Jack Robbins last year possessed the two best pass throwers in college football.

Dizzy on Football.

Up in Chicago last week, Dizzy Dean laughingly made the crack that he was picking the Redskins to beat the Chicago All-Stars "on account the Redskins have the best pitchers and everybody knows that pitching is 70 per cent of a team's strength."

Well, Dean was getting his football and his baseball a bit confused, inasmuch as the claim has never been made in football that a team's passing attack is 70 per cent of its strength. But it is, nevertheless, a potent percentage, and thus Baugh, with his passing, is certainly the most valuable man on the Redskins.

Australian Hopes Soar After Win

Final Singles Today Will Decide Winner; Bromwich Stars

By Henry McLemore,
United Press Sports Writer.

Germantown Cricket, Philadelphia, Sept. [illegible]—lights in the Southern [illegible] all but extinguished in [illegible] day's play for the Davis Cup glowed brightly again tonight when Australia's "iron men"—Jack Bromwich and Adrian Quist—defeated Don Budge and Gene Mako in doubles, 0—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—2.

The victory, achieved before a sellout crowd of 8,000, most of whom were sympathetic toward the Australians, kept the Aussies [illegible] in the running. The issue will be decided in tomorrow's two concluding matches in which Budge meets Quist and Bobby Riggs meets Bromwich. The Americans, because of their clean sweep on the opening day, need but one more victory to retain the trophy.

From "Down Under."

The men from "down under" really came from down under to win today's match. Everything was against them. Their [illegible] a tremendous shaking. They were faced by a team which was acclaimed as champions of the world—A team which had crushed them in straight sets in the National Doubles final in Boston last week. And there was the extra burden of knowing that defeat meant the end of the trail.

Then the firing began, and in [illegible] first set, which saw them lose six straight games, the Australians didn't appear to have a chance. The Americans were here, there and everywhere smashing the ball for winners. First Budge would kill one from high overhead. Then Mako would shatter the Australians' defense with a piercing slash down the middle or a cunning drop shot or lob.

When the teams changed courts for the start of the second set the foreigners were a 100-to-1 shot. Then, by one of those unexplainable rejuvenations that happen so often in sports, the Australians gathered their shattered forces, welded themselves into an invulnerable unit, and moved on to the attack. From Quist's first serve in the seventh game of the match until the final point, the Australians took command and never relinquished it.

As beautifully as Quist played in the last three sets, it was Bromwich, the left-handed, right-handed, two handed, one-handed 19-year-old youngster, who dominated the court. There were many stretches when Bromwich, still a growing boy with

Bucs Stop Card Streak; Win 5 to 3

Pirates Bunch Safeties to Give Bauers 10th Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 4.—The Pittsburgh Pirates stopped the St. Louis Cardinals' winning streak at six games today with a 5-to-3 victory in the finale of their three-game series.

RIZZO.

The triumph boosted the Buccaneer's margin in the National League to six games over the second place Cincinnati Reds who were nosed out by Chicago, 2 to 1, in 11 innings.

With Big Russ Bauers holding the Redbird sluggers in check on nine hits to collect his tenth win against 12 defeats, the Pirates bunched their pingles to score all their runs in the second and sixth.

Their first cluster of three tallies came when, with two out, Gus Suhr walked, Pep Young tripled, Al Todd doubled and Russ Bauers singled.

In the sixth, Johnny Rizzo singled, Young doubled and Ray Berres singled for the other two runs.

Roy Henshaw survived both blasts, but was removed for a pinch-hitter in the seventh and Clyde Shoun finished.

Two of the Cardinals runs were unearned. Don Gutteridge singled and then scored in a wild second-inning display which saw him move all the way around on errors. Attempting to catch the Cardinal flyer stealing second, Todd threw into centerfield and Young, relaying the throw back to catch him at home, pegged wildly.

The final run in the ninth came on three successive singles.

Riley Smith Is Back in Town!

Riley Smith, Redskin quarterback, arrived here at 8:25 yesterday morning preparatory to entering Georgetown Hospital today for treatment of his injured right leg.

Smith said he had been examined Saturday by Dr. E. Moran, Redskin club physician, and that Moran told him his injury was not nearly as serious as first thought. While he would not say when Smith could return to the line-up, Dr. Moran labeled reports that the former Alabama star would be out all season as "absurd."

Dr. Moran said that Smith's injury is not the result of a damaged muscle in his thigh, but of a hemorrhage gathered from a broken blood vessel above his knee. This is causing the leg to swell, he said.

Smith plans to remain in Georgetown Hospital for several days and then, if his condition is improved sufficiently, to rejoin his mates here late this week.

Yank Homers Whip Griffs In 7-4 Game

GordonGets 2,DiMaggio, Henrich, West, Myer One Apiece.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York Sept. 4.—Yankee power prevailed today as the "owners" of the American League pennant turned their heavy guns on the Nats and blasted them into a 7-4 defeat with an 11-hit barrage that included four home runs.

The Nats virtually were helpless in the face of this brilliant exhibition of batting, plus a seven-hit brand of pitching served up by "Bump" Hadley. They were out of the running as early as the sixth inning, at which juncture New York held a 6-1 lead.

Diminutive Joe Gordon, Yankee second sacker, paced his mates four hits, two of them home runs. The first was a terrific drive that fell into New York's bullpen some 425 feet from home-plate. He also clouted a brace of doubles to round out a perfect day at bat. His efforts tied the major league record for extra-base hits in a single game.

Joe DiMaggio added his 28th home run of the season to the damage, but it was an inside job. The ball hit the leftfield barrier and the San Francisco slugger had to beat Al Simmons' throw to the plate. Tommy Henrich socked his 21st homer of the campaign in the fifth inning, bringing the total of Yanks who have 20 or more home runs to five. DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig, Bill Dickey and Gordon are the others.

Home-run fever finally spread to Washington's dugout in the ninth as Buddy Myer and Sammy West poled hits into the rightfield bleach-

"Slingin' Sammy" Baugh.
Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.

The college football player who does not happen to have a national reputation is in a tough spot when he starts out trying to land a job with a professional team.

BAUGH.

Do not misunderstand me. I do not mean that he is not as good a football player as the fellow who was an All-American in college. Very possibly he is as good or better. What I mean is that he does not get the same break. There's more pressure on him.

He has to make good in three weeks after putting on a professional uniform or the chances are that his professional career is closed forever. Unless he can show the coach in the first three weeks of training before the squad must be cut that he has the makings of a pro league player he gets his release and that's probably the last heard of him in pro football.

The fellow with a national reputation gets a better break. He actually doesn't have to make good in those first three weeks. The coaches will string along with him in the hope that he will justify his clippings. The fact that he was a big star in college football is in his favor.

I don't mean that the coaches will string along with him forever, but when cutting time comes they won't be so quick to set the big college star adrift. H has virtually the entire season to make good in and that's how he gets a better break than the fellow who wasn't particularly famous in college.

I was lucky enough to make an impression in pro football from the start, but if I had failed to do well in those first three weeks of training I think I'd have been retained on my college reputation. Some other fellows who broke in with me didn't get that same break.

And as I was saying, if a college player doesn't make good during his first training period, and is released, the chances are he will never get another opportunity to come back to the big leagues.

It isn't like professional baseball. A ball player can get a big league tryout, go back to the minors, earn another trial in the majors and repeat that process three or four times. In the big league of pro football, the poor fellow only has one chance, his first one.

It's because of the pro football system. Unlike baseball, the rookie can't develop himself in the minor leagues. The minor leagues of football are loosely organized and the coaching is usually such that the player learns little. If he is released by one big league pro team, he is rarely claimed by another one.

There are precious few cases where players who have been released by a National League team and who have gone back to the semi-pros, have been able to return to the big league. There are too many new stars coming out of college ranks and available to the coaches.

There is one exception, however, and it's a notable one. Charley Malone, Redskins' end, was a fellow who made the grade after failing in one trial with a National League team.

The Chicago Bears signed Malone, out of Texas A. & M. after the 1932 season. He was given a three weeks' tryout and released before the season started. The Redskins, Brooklyn, the Giants and several other clubs had attempted to sign Malone when he graduated but he chose to sign with the Bears. However, when the Bears let him go, none of the other clubs was interested enough to give him a tryout. They figured that if the Bears saw no promise in him he would not help their clubs.

It happened that Malone was

Vic Ghezzi, Hogan Win

By the Associated Press.

Hershey, Pa., Sept. 4.—Lanky Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., and Stocky Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., won the Hershey round-robin, best-ball golf tourney today by a margin of 15 points.

Paul Runyan, national professional champion, of White Plains, N. Y., and Sammy Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., took second place with a score of plus 2.

Playing together in competition for the first time, Ghezzi and Hogan took the first prize by trouncing Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., and Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, 5 up. This dropped Nelson and Dudley into a third-place tie with Gene Sarazen, Brookfield Center, Conn., and Jimmy Hines, of Great Neck, N. Y.

Final Standings:

Ghezzi-Hogan, plus 17.
Runyan-Snead, plus 2.
Nelson-Dudley, zero ($325 each).
Sarazen-Hines, zero ($325 each).
Metz-Laffoon, minus 2 ($230 each).
Cooper-Smith, minus 3 ($200 each).
Picard-Revolta, minus 4 ($150 each).

In this morning's round Metz and Laffoon finished even against Ghezzi and Hogan; Sarazen and Hines beat Runyan and Snead, 2 up; Nelson and Dudley beat Picard and Revolta, 1 up, and Cooper and Smith beat Thomson and Little, 3 up.

Aussies Beat U. S. Women

East Hampton, N. Y., Sept. 4 (AP). Australia's women tennis players won a close victory over an American team today, 15 sets to 14, after the United States players rallied in today's play to tie the match play at 6-all.

Australia was leading, 4 to 2, in matches at the close of yesterday's play at Southampton, but, led by Helen Jacobs, the Americans won four of today's six matches and tied the match score. Officials called for a decision on a total set basis and Australia won.

Miss Jacobs whipped Nancy Wynne, Australia's No. 1 woman player, 5—7, 6—2, 6—0, in her last match before the start of the National Singles. Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., followed the Californian's lead and soundly trounced Thelma Coyne, second-ranking Australian player, 7—5, 7—5.

Dorothy Workman scored the third American singles victory by defeating Dorothy Stevenson, fourth-ranking, Australian player 6—4, 5—7, 6—2. Mrs. Harry C. Hopman and Miss Stevenson, 6—2, 8—6, in the first doubles match and put the United States ahead, 6 to 5, in matches.

'Skins Face Star Eleven In Big Game

Baugh Will Play but a Small Part Tonight in Contest.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 4.—Battered, bruised and wondering where their next first down is coming from, the barnstorming Redskins will take the field again tomorrow night against another collection of college all-stars.

They will meet up with the so-called "Texas All-Stars" in the Dallas Cotton Bowl in their last pre-season game before the opening of the league season. And the eyes of Texas to the number of 25,000 pairs will be on them.

Eager to maintain their record of never having been beaten by an invading professional team, the Texans have padded their line-up for the Redskins. From Pittsburgh they drafted Frank Patrick, smashing fullback; from Harvard they imported Alex Kevorkian, big tackle; from Fordham, they signed Al Barbatsky, another powerhouse tackle. In the line-up also will be emigres from Ohio State, Georgia Tech and Southern California.

Rating the Texas line-up as the equal of the Chicago All-Stars who beat the Redskins last week, Dallas bookmakers are refusing to quote the Redskins as the favorite with the betting odds "4 to 5 and take your pick."

Barring a miraculous recovery, Sammy Baugh, former Texas favorite and the big excuse for the Redskins' appearance here, will play only a few minutes of the game. Still suffering from an injured foot, aggravated at Chicago, Baugh will fulfill the Redskins' contract by appearing in the starting line-up, but he may be withdrawn rapidly.

Edwards Calls Signals.

Baugh's incapacity, coupled with Riley Smith's injury, leaves the Redskins virtually bereft of quarterbacks, and to Capt. Turk Edwards; giant tackle, will be entrusted the signal-calling and direction of the team.

Bearing the brunt of the Redskins' offense will be the veteran Max Krause and Coach Flaherty's two pet rookies—George Karamatic and Dick Tuckey. At Chicago last Wednesday, both Karamatic and Tuckey gave impressive performances—the former revealing himself as a veritable bull on the offense, plus kicking ability, and Tuckey showing both coolness and

Case vs. Chapman 'Race' Is Off

George Case's race with Ben Chapman, which was to have been staged between games this afternoon at Griffith Stadium, was definitely canceled yesterday after the young Washington outfielder pulled up lame after a workout.

Dr. Larkin, club physician, predicted the lad would be unable to run earlier in the week, after he strained a muscle running to first base, but agreed to Case's request to withhold a decision until after the trial run. It is doubtful if Case will see action for at least a week or ten days.

Today's double-header with Boston begins at 1:30 o'clock, with Pete Appleton scheduled to pitch the first game for the Nats, and "Dutch" Leonard the nightcap.

Joe Kuhel's Single Wins For Chisox

Scores Meyer in 10th as Tigers Bow by 2 to 1.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—Joe Kuhel's single with two out in the tenth inning today scored Rookie Second Baseman George Meyer from second base to give Chicago's White Sox a 2-to-1 victory over Detroit and break up a pitching duel between Johnny Rigney and Al Benton.

KUHEL.

Rigney's hurling and batting kept the Sox in the ball game. He gave up only four hits in registering his eighth win of the year and collected a single, a double and a sacrifice. His single drove home Meyer, brought up from Dallas, with the other Sox run in the third. His sacrifice came in the tenth and moved Meyer, who had walked, into scoring position.

Benton yielded only six hits, but with the Tigers helpless against Rigney's offerings, he had to drive in the only run.

Chicubs Smash Reds' Streak on Galan's Homer in Eleventh, 2-1

Outfielder Also Scores Tying Tally

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Sept. 4.—Augie Galan hit a triple and home run to give Chicago a 2-to-1, 11-inning victory over the Cincinnati Reds in the final of the series here today. The triumph snapped the Reds' winning streak at six.

Charlie Root held the McKechnie men scoreless until the ninth when Hiv Goodman clouted his thirtieth home run over the centerfield fence to knot the score. Galan had tripled and come home on Reynolds' single in the fourth.

Whitey Moore set the enemy down with five hits in eight innings and Gene Schott, who offered up the home-run pitch, was charged with the loss.

Ed Oliver Thrills Throng With Drives

Walper-Larkin Win Best Ball Event With 67 After Play-off With Spencer-Cunningham; Oliver Has 72.

By Merrell W. Whitlesey.

Ed Oliver, the husky Wilmington pro, amazed some 2,000 fans yesterday at Indian Spring with a long-hitting exhibition, but Leo Walper supplied most of the golf with a sub-par 68 as he won the sweepstakes and paired with Gene Larkin to win the best-ball play in the Sunday matches.

Walper and Larkin tied Cliff Spencer and Frank Cunningham with 67s but won the $50 prize with a two-under-par performance in the seven extra-hole playoff. Walper's $25 share of the best-ball event ran his winnings up to $75 for the day as his 68 was worth $50. Spencer's one under regulation 70 won the second low sweeps money, $20.

Oliver, a guest of Host Pro Al Jamison, hit the longest ball off the first tee, a 300-yard clout, to win the special driving prize, and on virtually every hole knocked the ball distances never before seen by a majority of the gallery.

On the par-five fifteenth hole he was over with a drive and five iron, and on the 525-yard sixteenth hole, carried over the green with a tee shot and four-wood. Oliver hit 17 consecutive greens in regulation figures but was one over par for the round as he three-putted four greens. He had three birdies.

Walper played the outgoing nine in 33, two under par, with birdies on the third and seventh, and was back in 35, going over on the eleventh where he was trapped in two, and scoring consecutive birdies on 13 and 14. Spencer missed par on just one hole, the sixth, and birdied the seventh and fifteenth.

Playing flawless golf, Walper left few openings for his partner, Larkin, but the latter birdied the fifteenth for the stroke that enabled them to tie the Spencer-Cunningham duo. Cunningham's three on the last hole was one of the three strokes he aided Spencer.

Spencer three-putted the first green on the playoff and Walper birdied the third to take a 2-stroke lead. Larkin and Cunningham halved the sixth in birdie twos and darkness halted the playoff on the next hole.

The duos of Treder-Diffenbaugh and Cox-Worsham had 68s, including six birdies by the latter team. Cox started the first nine with two birds and Worsham hit on 10 and 11, but they were over par on three holes and finished with the 68.

Cox and Barnett matched par figures with individual 71s, while Cunningham had 72 and Larkin 73 for the next best scores.

Greentree Four Wins

Jaguars Bow in Open Polo Play.

By the Associated Press.

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 4.—Greentree turned back the Jaguars in the first match of the National Open Polo championship today, 15 to 9. With the veteran Tommy Hitchcock directing the play the winners scored six ties in the last two periods to overpower Winston Guest's Anglo-American side.

The line-ups:

Greentree.	Position.	Jaguars.
Bostwick	No. 1	Mills
Cavanagh	No. 2	Guest

Corrigan Joins Reds, Acts Like a Dodger!

Cincinnati, Sept. 4 (AP)—Douglas (wrong way) Corrigan, who flew to Ireland, came out to the Reds-Cubs baseball game at Crosley Field today and again got his directions mixed.

CORRIGAN.

Interrupting the game to take a turn at bat, he swung at a pitch by the veteran Charlie Root. Corrigan hit the ball, but it went the wrong way into foul territory.

Corrigan ran anyway—the wrong way—to third base.

Dusek and Steinke Signed for Arena

Ernie Dusek, whose lone defeat in some six years of wrestling around Washington was a disqualification at the hands of Champion Crusher Casey, will cross paths with wrestledom's "Iron Man" Thursday night in the headline men's bout opening the 1938-39 indoor season at Turner's Arena.

Dusek's opponent is Hans Steinke, who is considered one of the truly great wrestlers of all time.

Dusek and Steinke will share the spotlight with two feminine matches. In one bout Dolly Dalton will engage Billy DeWitt, of St. Louis, and in the other Babe Murphy, of Los Angeles, will take on Jean Rogers, of Chicago.

skill as a passer. Ernie Pinckert will play the bulk of the game as the blocking back.

Whenever his starting line-up needs relief, Flaherty will send in the second-flight rookies, Leroy Campbell, Jim Abbitt, Jay Turner and Bill Hartman. This group is virtually untried and will be struggling against the fall of the ax which will cleave three members from the squad after the game.

The prime fear of the Redskins is that the Texans will cut loose with a long-range passing attack similar to that of the Chicago All-Stars, who piled up four touchdowns in the last half. In Dwight Sloan and Jack Robbins, the Arkansas pair, the Texans will have a passing duo who in college were rated second only to Baugh. And at the call of Coaches Fred Thomsen and Jimmy Kitt are, for example, six hefty tackles who average 220 pounds.

Aching for action is Don Irwin, whose injured knee kept him out of the Chicago game. But Flaherty is loath to risk further injury to the team's regular fullback with the season's opener nearing. Also fated to see little action, if any, is Ed Justice, who is troubled with a twisted shoulder.

Probable starting line-ups:

All-Stars.	Position.	Washington.

Lewis Worsham explodes from a trap to the left of the fourth green in the 12 pro exhibition matches yesterday at Indian Spring, played before a gallery of some 2,000 fans. Ed Oliver, long-driving Wilmington, Del., professional, whose tee shots were the day's sensation, is leaning on his putter, to Worsham's left. Wiffy Cox, Congressional, and Al Jamison, host pro, were in the same foursome.

Macks Split With Bosox

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 4.—The Athletics broke a five-game losing streak today by nosing out the Boston Red Sox, 12 to 11, in the first game of a twin bill, but fell to defeat in the second, 12 to 2.

It took Sam Chapman's fifteenth homer of the season with the bases loaded in the eighth to decide the first game.

Home runs by Pinky Higgins with the bases loaded, followed by Ben Chapman's homer in the first inning of the second game, started the Sox on their hitting spree.

ers, but it was a weak attempt to match the host club's amazing stickwork.

New York's run-manufacturing machinery ground out four runs in the third, and singletons in the fifth, sixth and eighth innings, while Hadley held Washington scoreless until the sixth.

Gordon opened the third by rapping Elon Hogsett's first pitch into the bullpen—one of the longest drives of the season. Hadley grounded out, but Crosetti sliced a double off the rightfield screen and scored on Rolfe's single. Henrich popped up to Myer in short rightfield, but DiMaggio picked out a fast ball and walloped it to deep centerfield for his homer.

Henrich's second home run accounted for the Yanks' fifth marker, and they got their sixth on Gordon's second circuit swat. And it was Gordons' double, following singles by Gehrig and Dickey, that brought New York its final run in the eighth.

Rick Ferrell scored Washington's first run, getting on base through a walk. He went to third on Harry Kelley's single and came home on Wasdell's infield out.

The Nats went down fighting in the ninth, but by that time were too far out of the running to disturb their hosts.

Notre Dame, Gold Cup Defender, Sinks in Accident During Trial

Herb Mendelson's Driver Injured in Spill; Planned to Bring Boat to D. C. Regatta.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 4.—Capsizing during a trial spin in the St. Clair River near Algonac this afternoon, Herb Mendelson's new Gold Cup defender, Notre Dame, went to the bottom and out of the trophy race on the eDtroit River tomorrow.

Clell Perry, driver of the cup defender suffered a fractured shoulder and arm and was taken to a hospital. Ernest Herndon, his mechanic, was uninjured.

Elimination of the new Notre Dame with which Mendelson had hoped to repeat his last year's victory left the Italian challenger Alagi and six other boats in the race. Shortly before the mishap Mendelson said he expected his craft to make a 72-mile an hour average in tomorrow's race. His 1937 Notre Dame had a best heat speed of 68.845 miles an hour.

(Mendelson won the President's Cup Regatta here last year with his old Notre Dame. The new boat was to have been brought to Washington for the annual classic following the Gold Cup races in Detroit.)

The racing committee today agreed to accept the assurance of three owners of the Gold Cup nominees that their craft could make at least 65 miles an hour.

This action relieved Warnie, owned by James W. Anderson, of Louisville, Ky.; My Sin, owned by Zalmon G. Simmons, jr., of Greenwich, Conn., and Excuse Me, Horace F. Dodge's second entry in the race, from making the stipulated qualifying trials today.

Count Theo Rossi, of Turin, Italy, who finished second to Mendelson last year in his Alagi, will drive the same boat tomorrow. Another veteran of Gold Cup competition in the race will be Dodge's Delphine IX. Miss Golden Gate, entered from Oakland, Calif., by young Dan Arena, and E. A. Wilson's Miss Canada III, of Ingersoll, Ontario, complete the entry list.

Count Rossi, whose Alagi hit a speed of 71.1446 miles an hour in one lap of last year's third heat, said today that alterations he had made on the boat since that time may have slowed it down somewhat, but he believed they had improved its maneuverability.

Tomorrow's feature race will be run in three 30-mile heats, each heat calling for 10 laps of the course. In addition to the Gold Cup, there will be prizes for the fastest heat and for the fastest foreign boat.

A 27-mile three-heat race for 225 cubic inch displacement hydroplanes for a trophy honoring the memory of the late W. D. Edenburn will complete the Labor Day Program. The entries include Don Campbell's Kayjay, of Cincinnati, which won a three-heat victory over Milton Harris' Scram, also of Cincinnati, in yesterday's division of the 225 class contest. Harris has also nominated Scram for tomorrow's secondary event.

Aussies Beat Budge and Mako, Stay in Running for Davis Cup

a shy, sweet smile, lifted his game to as high a peak as doubles play has ever known. In these brilliant patches Bromwich simply was unbeatable. Nothing could get by him. He took the mighty smasnes of the mighty Budge and lashed them back for winners. He took Budge's volleys and spun them back to the land from where there's no returning. He pounced on Mako's bristling drives and floating lobs. Once—and the cheer of the crowd still echoes over these fashionable grounds—Bromwich flung himself halfway across the court and, flat on his belly, flicked back a volley for a placement.

Before Bromwich's whirlwind play, which was soundly augmented by that of Quist, the Americans quickly disintegrated. Mako was the first to go. Superb when his side was riding the crest, the blond Californian was beaten apart by the steady barrage of shots laid down in front of him, and at the finish was playing like a novice. It was Mako's loss of service, at love, in the sixth game of the second set that gave the Australians the advantage they needed.

Budge faltered for the first time in the third game of the third set, when the Australians broke his supposedly invincible service with the loss of but a point. A break through Bromwich in the next game leveled the score at 2-all, and games followed service until Mako was routed in the ninth game to send the visitors in front 5-4. Quist then banged out his service at love for the set.

The Americans, both of them, folded like the Arabs' tents in the final set, and Quist and Bromwich, especially the latter, raked their court with winners. It was flog-flog-flog for the Australians, and flub-flub-flub for the Americans. Budge lost his service in the opening game and Bromwich held his in the second. Mako braced to keep his inviolate in the third, but the Australians ran three games to go 5—2. The Americans salvaged the seventh, but Quist made it set and match with a scorching service in the eighth.

Deoudes Nips No. 4 Nine, Takes First Position in Junior League

Russell Motors Wins rince Georges County Title; Blue Ribbon Midget Loop Winner.

With Jack Redinger, a Post All-High pitcher, allowing only three hits, Deoudes Celery nine nosed out No. 4 Police Boys Club, 4-3, yesterday to take first place in the National City Junior League.

Arthur Faircloth, Anscostia High School hurler, matched the 3-hit work of Redinger as No. 11 Police Boys Club, 8-1. Chuck Scheele, No. 11 Police shortstop, collected four hits in four times at bat to aid Faircloth in the victory.

Behind the 4-hit pitching of Lefty Mostow, Coffey Screen trounced No. 11 Police Boys, 13-0, in the second game of the day for the latter nine. Charlie Kendall of Tech was the slugging star, getting three hits in five attempts.

Dick Lynham hurled steady ball and drove out three hits in four appearances to help No. 4 Police Boys Club defeat No. 10 Police Boy's Club, 10-2. Several of the junior teams played two games following postponements.

Blue Ribbon Bakery clinched the National City Midget League crown by registering its eleventh straight win of the season over No. 10 Police Boys Club, 14-3. The Bakery lads will be presented a trophy for garnering both the first and second half league titles. A sizable crowd on the South Ellipse saw Tony DiBlasi, Kenneth Bransdorf, and Charlie Kendall lead an offensive which completely buried the losers under an avalanche of base hits.

Russell Motors won the Prince Georges County title by shutting out the Prince Georges Athletic Club nine, 6—0. Tom Doonis pitched steadily for the winners, keeping seven hits well-scattered.

Bowie Dixon slammed a homer, double, and single to give the Maryland Athletic Club a 10-5 victory over the Takoma Reds. The winners will meet the strong Capitol Heights team today to settle the title argument out Maryland Park way.

Washington Ranks Fourth For New Homes

Housing Survey Covers 310 Cities in the United States.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Minneapolis, Sept. 4.—"In a new survey of 41 States and the District of Columbia, Washington, D. C., held fourth place in the Nation, both in number of homes constructed and their value," C. J. Ryan, vice president in charge of the mortgage loan division of Investors Syndicate, said today. Mr. Ryan's report was based on a housing survey made in 310 cities, covering 1937, comprising more than a third of the population of the United States.

"New residences put up in Washington, D. C.," he said, "provided shelter in 1937 for 21,408 persons, a drop of 4,108, or 16 per cent, from 1936. During the seven years ended with 1937, homes erected in this city sheltered 87,200 persons, or about 62 per cent of the 141,284 estimated population increase in seven years."

The survey indicates that homes built in 1937 represent about ¼ of those constructed in the entire seven-year period of this survey—1931 to 1937, inclusive. Persons provided with new housing in 1937 numbered 21,408, which was 172.78 per cent more than those newly-housed in 1930, the base year of this survey. This is the largest gain over 1930 in the entire State list. Volume of home-building in Washington reached its now point in 1933, when new homes were constructed for only 2,320 persons.

Housing Cost Up $31.64.

"Average per-capita new housing cost in Washington, D. C., last year was $997.68, or 3.27 per cent above the 1936 average," Mr. Ryan stated. "This was the first advance in per-person cost in this city since 1933.

"Starting with 1930, when per-capita cost in Washington, D. C., was $1,769.47, the average fell to $1,363.63 in 1932, rose to $1,445.94 in 1933, and dropped in each of the three succeeding years until it reached $966.04 in 1936 its eight-year low.

"The per-person average cost in Washington of $1,769.47 in 1930, which is generally referred to nationally as the 'normal' building year, was 43.6 per cent higher than the 1937 average. The 1937 national average per-capita cost was $1,006.08.

"Investors Syndicate believes that Washington, D. C., actually and relatively, will continue to forge ahead in home-building activities because home construction has not yet caught up with estimated increase in population."

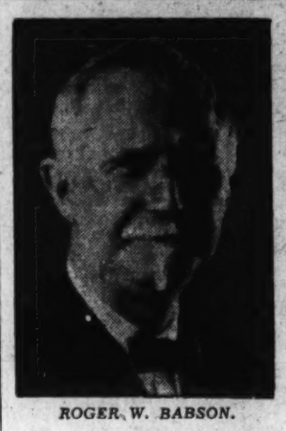
Labor Day Finds Employers And Workers in Wide Rift

As Long as Labor Leaders Maintain Their Present Attitude We Can Have No Permanent Prosperity, Babson Says.

By Roger W. Babson.

Babson Park, Mass., Sept. 4.—A parade by the Knights of Labor in New York 50 years ago started Labor Day. Now, in every State it is a legal holiday, highlighted by speeches from politicians and labor leaders. Monday's speakers, however, will say little about the No. 1 problem of the day—namely, the widening gulf between employers and workers. Scant attention will be paid to the great need for a new spirit of co-operation in business.



ROGER W. BABSON.

Recently in this column, I discussed the railroads. I told of their financial troubles and how they were trying to avoid additional receiverships through big economies in operating costs. I forecast that railroad workers would be forced to accept a compromise reduction in pay as their contribution to keeping the carriers in operation. I emphasized that because pay rates had been unjustly boosted last fall, thousands more of employes are now jobless than would be if wage scales had been more in line with railroad revenues.

A Labor Leader's Reply.

Several days later I received the following letter from the president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen—one of the four big unions which control railroad labor. I am quoting it because it gives an interesting insight into the attitude of those who strongly influence workers' actions:

"* * * Need I comment about your ready display of callousness toward railroad employes or your miserly contemplation of the loot awaiting the grasping Wall street gang? Railroad labor and the American public are on to your game. We know that the carriers are seeking a wage cut in order to divert more wealth into the channels of the bankers and bondholders. We know that economists, like yourself, lend aid and comfort to such modern highway robbery. We know, too, that there is not one spark of decency or humanity in any man who gloats over great unemployment in the railroad industry * * *

"In fact, you are due for a rude awakening. We do not intend to take any wage cuts, for we believe in a prosperity that extends to all the people, not just to the few vultures and magpies with whom you consort. We believe in supporting the President's recovery program, to the end that railroad bankers and their economic advisers will be eliminated from the scene. It is their liquidation, not that of railroad labor, which will be a boon to the industry and to the national economy."

(Signed) A. F. WHITNEY,
President.

Note that Mr. Whitney avoided mentioning the following vital comment in my article: "The net result (of labor demands) is that railroad wages are today the highest on record and the number of workers the lowest in 40 years." It would be difficult for Mr. Whitney to show that the high-wage policy of the Brotherhoods has helped the thousands of his fellow-workers who have been fired in order to cut down expenses! Nor would the millions of workers in allied industries, who are idle because railroads are so poor that they cannot buy the new equipment which they need, agree that high wages bring about a "prosperity which extends to all the people."

"Public Enemies."

The point in Mr. Whitney's letter, however, which bothers me most is this: "We know that the carriers are seeking a wage cut in order to divert more wealth into the channels of the bankers and bondholders." Why does he think the bondholders are not entitled to fair play? These bondholders are not public enemies. They are insurance companies, savings banks, colleges, hospitals, churches and individuals. They loaned money to build tracks and depots, to buy locomotives and freight cars—the equipment which gives railroad workers their jobs.

Today, railroads representing one-third of the Nation's mileage are paying no interest on these bond loans. Moreover, only a small portion of the original dollar loaned may ever be paid back unless wages are reduced to compare with wages paid in other industries. Furthermore, the other two-thirds of the carrier system has been skating along the brink of bankruptcy. If railroad workers are entitled to the highest wage rates in history, then bondholders are at least entitled to the agreed interest and repayment of the money they loaned to provide these employes with their jobs!

Hurting Their Cause.

However, I doubt if Mr. Whitney's attitude is approved by intelligent wage workers. They know it does not help labor's cause. Employers cannot go on paying high wages and losing money, nor can they increase the selling price of their goods and risk the loss of their customers. As a result of labor leaders' demands, employers must do one of two things: (1) Throw up their hands and go out of business; or (2) seek every method possible to get along with fewer employes. Will either development aid "a prosperity that extends to all the people?"

Business this fall will be better. For several months production has been running below consumption. That condition cannot continue. Activity is already increasing. Hence, I am convinced that business is going to be good for the next several months, at least.

Over the longer term, however, I am not so certain. I know that o long as labor leaders maintain their present attitude we can have no permanent prosperity. Even the prospect that the Government may have to take over the carriers does not seem to worry railroad labor. Like other workers, they think a Government job is pretty soft and secure. This may be true as long as only a few people work for Uncle Sam. As, however, the number of public employes increases, the security of all public employes decreases. As more and more employers go out of business, less money can be collected from taxes to pay Government salaries.

Teamwork.

Yet, the Government is helping labor leaders antagonize employers. Through relief, the Government is supporting labor leaders in their organizing and striking efforts; while through the NLRB's radical decisions, the Government is helping to widen the rift between employer and worker. Today, management and labor are pulling in opposite directions. This situation cannot last forever. We can never have real prosperity until they again pull together. This is the gospel that should be shouted from every bandstand and soap-box on Labor Day.

Trading Suggestions For Commodities

New York, Sept. 4.—The following recommendations as to purchasing policy for various important commodities are made by the Standard Statistics Co.:

Advance purchases justified at present levels—Anthracite coal, bituminous coal, burlap, butter, cement, cheese, copper, cottonseed oil, eggs, hides, lard, lead, lumber, paraffin, pig iron, rayon, rosin, rubber, silk, tin.

Advance purchases should be postponed: Cocoa, coffee, corn, cotton, flour, fuel oil, gasoline, linseed oil, lubricating oil, oats, rye, silver, steel, sugar, tallow, turpentine, wheat, wool.

Steel Output Moves Up to 44.5 Per Cent

Brisk Demand From Structural Projects Is Feature of Week.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 4.—A definite improvement in sentiment pervades the steel market, now in a waiting mood pending developments after Labor Day, the Magazine Steel said today.

The increase in steel production which started early in July is continuing and indications are that the rise will reach well into the fall. Virtually all producers found August well above July in tonnage.

A decided upward movement in structural steel projects is providing considerable tonnage, some oil companies are figuring on additional equipment and shipbuilding is progressing to the point where requirements are being specified in larger tonnages.

An advance of 1 point was registered last week in the national operating rate, which reached 44.5 per cent. Pittsburgh was the only district showing a lower rate, being down 1 point to 32 per cent.

Chicago gained 2.5 points to 40 per cent, eastern Pennsylvania, 3 to 33, Buffalo, 2.5 to 49, Birmingham, 3 to 56, St. Louis, 12 to 45, Detroit 7 to 67 and Youngstown, 2 to 45. There was no change at Cleveland at 41, Cincinnati at 65, New England at 50 and Wheeling at 54.

Pig Iron Increase.

Pig iron output in August was 1,495,245 tons, 23.8 per cent over July in both daily average and total tonnage.

No announcement has been made on prices for the fourth quarter, leading to the belief present prices are likely to continue to the end of the year. Current prices are steady except in reinforcing bars and fabricated steel, where some concessions are being made.

Railroad buying is not being counted on for much tonnage in early fall. Automobile tonnage is expected to rise with the sale of new models.

A slight adjustment at Chicago brought an increase of 4 cents in the steelworks scrap composite to $14.29. The iron and steel composite remained at $36.50 and the finished steel at $57.20.

D. C. Bride Killed In Delaware Crash

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 4. (AP).—Mrs. Marie Falck, 1632 C street northeast, Washington, a bride of three months, was fatally injured in an automobile accident today.

The car, driven by her husband, W. E. Falck, upset near here. Falck and Edward Flannigan, 18, of Peeksville, N. Y., another occupant, escaped injury.

Girl Is 7th Victim Of Colorado Flood

Denver, Sept. 4 (U.P.).—The body of the seventh victim of north central Colorado's floods, Miss Georgia Goodrich, 17, of Evergreen, Colo., was recovered today while thousands of workmen wielded picks and shovels to clean up widespread debris and ruins.

Federal and State agencies combined efforts toward rehabilitation. The task centered in Morrison, a resort town wrecked by a swift torrent which swept six motorists to death and destroyed an undetermined number of automobiles from which occupants fled to the sides of Bear Creek Canyon.

Bedtime Stories

Looking Things Over.

It may save you some regret.
—Jerry Muskrat.

Jerry Muskrat was disturbed, not to say upset. Not since he and Mrs. Jerry had been swept away on a great flood one spring had Jerry felt quite so upset. Even then there had been no uncertainty in his mind as to what they would do if they were not carried too far; they would make their way back to the Smiling Pool, for that was home. Now Mrs. Jerry was suggesting that perhaps it would be best for them to leave the Smiling Pool, leave it for good and make a home elsewhere. She had even been away to look for such a place and had found one that she thought would do.

"Well?" said Mrs. Jerry in an inquiring tone.

At first Jerry had thought Mrs. Jerry crazy even to suggest such a thing as leaving the Smiling Pool. But Jerry couldn't have lived with Mrs. Jerry as long as he had without developing much respect for her opinion and discovering that it was wise to listen to what she had to say. So when she suggested that they look things over together he agreed.

"First, we'll look over the food supply," said she, leading the way to where the cattails and rushes and sedges grew. Winding among these in all directions were little canals and paths which they themselves had made, or their children living in the neighborhood had made. Swimming in the canals and running in the paths, Jerry followed Mrs. Jerry and a queer feeling of uneasiness took possession of him. He tried to rid himself of it, but couldn't. It grew, instead. At first he couldn't account for it, but by the time they were back at the Big Rock in the Smiling Pool to rest and talk things over he knew the cause of that feeling. It was the realization that there really might be danger of going hungry by spring if they should remain there.

"Well?" said Mrs. Jerry in an inquiring tone.

"I don't see what has happened to those cattails," grumbled Jerry.

"Too many muskrats happened to them," replied Mrs. Jerry dryly. "For the last two years we have had big families, and big families eat a lot. As you know, some of the children are staying. That means that this coming winter there will be more of us here at the Smiling Pool than in any winter before. There will be more to eat cattail roots, for there is little else we can get then and fewer roots to be eaten. Something must be done."

"But we mustn't be too hasty, my dear. We mustn't be too hasty. We might fare still worse somewhere else," squeaked Jerry. "We don't know what the winter will be. It may be short."

"And it may be long, but the supply of food won't be," snapped Mrs. Jerry.

"I don't want to leave here," complained Jerry.

"No more do I," retorted Mrs. Jerry. "I don't want to starve to death, either, and something inside tells me that the time has come for us to make a new home somewhere else. Come on." She slid off the Big Rock and started off across the Smiling Pool, toward where the Laughing Brook leaves it to go to the Big River.

"Where are you going?" squeaked Jerry. Mrs. Jerry didn't answer, and after a moment or two of hesitation Jerry plunged into the water and swam after her.

Jerry swam fast, but so did Mrs. Jerry, and she was well down the Laughing Brook before he caught up with her. Again he wanted to know where she was going.

"To that place I told you about, the place I found when I was away. I want to look it over again," replied Mrs. Jerry.

"I'll go with you," panted Jerry.

"I thought you would. I thought you would want to look it over, too," replied Mrs. Jerry.

"Of course," said Jerry, as if that had been understood all along. "We'll look it over together. But we won't be hasty in deciding what to do. We won't be hasty, my dear."

"No, we won't be hasty," agreed Mrs. Jerry and turned her head to hide a grin. Insofar as she was concerned the matter was all settled.

David L. Selke, Press Veteran, Dies Here at 93

Long-Time Newspaperman Covered Lincoln's Assassination.

Services for David Louis Selke, 93, who died at his home, 3819 Military road northwest, Saturday, will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Gawler's Chapel, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Burial will be private.

One of the oldest newsmen in the United States, Mr. Selke was born in Germany. At 19 he came to this country, spending about a year in New York before joining the staff of the old Washington Republican. He spent the rest of his long life here.

Until he founded the Congressional Information Bureau, about 31 years ago, he worked on the Republican and on newspapers here and in Virginia. He covered the assassination of President Lincoln. He once said he worked for every newspaper in Washington, except the Star and Herald, as "everything from cub reporter to managing editor."

Three years ago Mr. Selke married Miss Sally T. Mason, whom he had known for many years. It was his third marriage. His first wife, whom he married at 22, died 28 years later. He later married again, his second wife dying about five years ago. His third wife was a music teacher in Los Angeles at the time of their marriage, but was teaching here when they met.

Mr. Selke is survived by his wife and a daughter, Mrs. Alice Selke Dixon, of Los Angeles. A son, David Louis Selke, jr., died sometime ago.

The Timid Soul.

Bob Burns Says—

Homer Croy says that the bigger a man is on the outside, the more he'll let 'em boss him around the house, but a little man on the outside wants to be a tyrant at home. My Uncle Chigger was one of them men that didn't have no spunk at all in dealin' with other men.

The other day I ran into him and he had his arm in a sling and both of his eyes were black. When I asked him what the trouble was, he says, "Well, I was going down the steps and my wife says, 'Be careful now and don't fall' and I wasn't gonna let no woman dictate to me so down I went!"
